Ventana Inn sold to Texas real estate firm

By KIERSTEN MCCUTCHAN

THERE'S A winner in the bidding war for the preeminent Ventana Inn in Big Sur.

Transamerica Corporation confirmed late yesterday that Crescent Real Estate Equities, Ltd. of Fort Worth, Texas, has become the new owner after outbidding two other groups — one local and one from Chicago.

The price tag was around $30 million, according to Kent Colwell, president of Ventana Inn, Inc. for 17 years. He would not comment on the exact sum. Colwell also would not comment as to why Crescent was chosen over the Big Sur-based Post Ranch group or the Huron group.

Colwell describes the new owners as "one of the largest real estate investment trusts in the United States."

The head of Crescent, Richard Rainwater, has also recently acquired several other outstanding luxury resorts, including the world-renowned Sonoma Mission Inn and the Canyon Ranch Spa in Tucson, Arizona, Colwell said.

He would not speculate whether there would be immediate facility or staff changes; Crescent has not been available for comment. Colwell expects the deal to close sometime before the end of the year.

Ventana Inn has been listed for two years in the number-three slot of the Andrew Harper's Hideaway Report, a survey that gets picked up in "Forbes." It is a monthly newsletter highlighting the most exclusive, posh resorts in the country, Colwell said.

"It is a big feather in the cap of your area that you have that resort there," he added. "They (Crescent) like the way Ventana Inn's been operated and the way it's interacting with the community. If you were a company wanting to purchase a luxury inn, Ventana would be it."

Pitch canker victims triple in new survey

By KIRSTIE WILDE

CITY FORESTERS have finished tallying up the dead, dying and damaged pine trees on Carmel public property and the news is terrible: Pine pitch canker now infects 1,766 city-owned trees.

City Forester Gary Kelly estimates there is also an equal number of trees invaded by the disease on private property in the village.

"Last year the total infected with pitch canker was 584 trees; the year before that it was 132," he told The Pine Cone. "And the 1997 count doesn't include all the trees that have been killed and cut down."

Kelly continues to nurture about 2,000 Monterey pine seedlings at the city nursery, sprouted from pine cones gathered under the older trees in town. He's hoping the seedlings can replace the trees that are dying, but there is no way to know yet if they can withstand pitch canker, a disease with no known cure or prevention.

"I'm advising people to plant Monterey Cypress in the meantime," he said.

The city provides gallon-sized trees free of charge.

One of 400 'super tree' clones Bud Lopez cultivated from trees resistant to pine pitch canker. The 1,200 others in the nursery died.

'Super tree' clones

The news is a little more hopeful at the Pebble Beach nursery, where about 400 surviving clones from 56 "super trees" have now rooted. The trees were discovered in August after an intense, nine-month research project conducted by Pebble Beach Co. biologists

A GIFT OF TIME

■ Eastwood makes offer Cal-Am can't refuse: free land, more river

By PAUL WOLF

THE GOAL of the project couldn't be described in more dramatic terms: Clint Eastwood wants to "buy the Peninsula some time" and to keep at bay those irksome state regulators who are breathing down the community's neck.

If Eastwood's proposal to pump Cal-Am water at his Coast Ranch is feasible, it could prove a major benefit to the environment by improving Carmel River flow and to the human population by keeping state regulators happy, according to Peninsula water officials.

SPECIAL REPORT

Eastwood's Coast Ranch, until recently known as Odello East, is a landmark 140-acre artichoke field just east of Highway 1 and south of Carmel river.

The California-American Water Co. has announced it will accept Eastwood's offer of five acres and several easements on the Coast Ranch as a new location for up to five production wells, which would be used instead of wells farther upstream.

No additional water would be drawn from Cal-Am's underground system under the plan.

The goal is simple: to lengthen — by perhaps as much as two miles — the distance that the river flows during the dry summer months.

Alan Williams

But there is more to Eastwood's offer.

It will include, if needed, a donation of up to 95 or 100 acre-feet of water from his private supply, a water right independent of the Cal-Am system, said Williams.

A total of 190 acre-feet is committed to an approved 79-unit residential development project for the artichoke fields. The water Eastwood is offering would be used to make sure the surface habitat won't get dried out if new wells are pumping beneath it.

"There are no strings attached," Alan Williams, Eastwood's business associate

Former Carmel psychologist arrested in France: murder charged

By TAMARA GRIPPI

TWO YEARS after James Nivette compared himself to O.J. Simpson in an interview with The Pine Cone, the 54-year-old psychologist found himself in a remarkably similar situation: On Thursday, he was arrested in France for murdering the mother of his child.

French police found Nivette in the city of Munster, near the German border Thursday afternoon, according to the Associated Press.

On Tuesday police found Gina Kristina Barnett's body in a Folsom townhouse she had shared with Nivette. She had been shot 13 times.

Police checked the Folsom home after Nivette and Barnett's 18-month-old son Tyler James was found all alone, crying on a sidewalk in San Mateo Monday morning. Police believe that Barnett was murdered Sunday night.

Nivette had a history of threatening and abusing women, according to Monterey court files.

Back in 1995, the state's psychology board revoked Nivette's license when he admitted to having sex with his patients. At the time Nivette compared charges against him to those facing the ex-football great; a comparison that seems so fitting now.

"If I were O.J. Simpson, I could defend myself against these allegations. But I'm not. I checked around; the lowest (legal) retainer would have been $20,000. I didn't — and don't — have the money," he told The Pine Cone.

Nivette's sexual misconduct occurred from 1984 through 1991, while he was working as a psychologist in Carmel.

In one reported case, Nivette lied to a patient, telling her that her husband was having an affair and that he (Nivette) was a government agent, widower and single parent.

In 1996, Nivette's 18-year marriage to Kirsten Strawn ended in divorce. Strawn said Nivette threatened her life several times and once struck her, leaving a scar on her chin where her teeth cut through.

Nivette also pleaded no contest to misdemeanor assault charges in Monterey County for giving Barnett a black eye. She filed a restraining order against Nivette in October.

Their baby was not physically injured, although police believe he may have seen his mother's murder. He is in foster care in San Mateo County. A hearing is scheduled Monday to decide if he will be placed with relatives.

APPLAUSE FOR HELPING HANDS

By KIRSTIE WILDE

"I NEED someone to carry on for me when I can't lift those bags of beans anymore," said 79-year old Nancy Costello as she looked around the Spanish Bay ballroom Tuesday.

Costello has been feeding hundreds of poor Monterey County farm workers for about three decades, and she's getting tired.

There was a legion of potential replacements in the room, and if one of them does not take over the driver's seat of Costello's trusty white panel truck, it will be a surprise . . . because the place was packed with past, present and future honorees of the annual Philanthropy Day awards luncheon.

Save Sunset has new weapon in fight against theater demolition

By PAUL WOLF

ASSERTING THAT they "have a strong ally in the state," opponents of the Sunset Center redevelopment say they are better equipped to fight the project than they were before last Friday.

The new weapon of the anti-redevelopment group known as Save Sunset was handed down by the five-person Historic Resources Commission, which unanimously agreed to nominate the Sunset Center complex for a state historic designation.

The vote, which took place in Oakland Nov. 14, is an automatic nomination for the national register of historic places. It is unlikely that the federal commission will disagree with the state commission, according to Carmelite Lois Roberts, the chief petitioner.

The center is a candidate but not an official listing on Carmel-by-the-Sea's own register of historic place. The only public

Police & Sheriff's Log

Man released following shoplift of raisins

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Department last week.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 9

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Assisted Sheriff's office in search for wanted subject who fled area on foot after traffic stop at Carpenter & Highway 1.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Sheriff looking for a man who fled on foot from Highway 1 and Aguajito — possibly took a taxi to Carmel. Unable to locate.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Man on 3rd reported suspicious noises coming from his garage. Upon arrival it was found to be four raccoons.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Resident on Scenic near 11th reported that a limb from a tree was broken. As a result, the entrance to his driveway was blocked. The limb was from a tree located between his property line and the south neighbor. Advised resident that he should contact a tree service on his behalf.

Carmel area: Woman working at a convalescent hospital needed assistance with a patient who was extremely violent and hospitalized for dementia.

Carmel Valley: At a ranch off Carmel Valley Road, a man threatened to kill his brother.

Carmel Valley: An unknown person stole a Rolex watch from the office of a Carmel Valley inn.

Carmel Valley: A woman reports that her boss, from a business off Carmel Valley Road, held a knife to her throat and threw her out of the back door of the business.

Pebble Beach: Off of Bird Rock, a woman reports she is unable to locate her backpack and wallet that she placed in the closet of the person for whom she is the caretaker.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 10

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a red Suzuki utility vehicle occupied by two females driving recklessly on Carpenter and possibly under the influence. Unable to locate.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Citizen on Santa Rita advised that 4 female juveniles (about age 12) were throwing rocks onto his roof. Girls contacted and warned.

Carmel area: Two sleeping bags found under the Carmel River Bridge were taken as found property and placed into an evidence locker. If not claimed in 90 days, property will be destroyed.

Carmel area: In the area of Mid Valley, a person reports having a personal check that was altered. She says that she wrote the check for five dollars and when she got her statement, it was changed to $25.

Carmel Valley: Vehicle found on Carmel Valley Road with no plates, no registration and no driver; it was parked facing ongoing traffic. Vehicle towed and stored.

Pebble Beach: A resident of Sonado Road reported that an unknown person stole a black box from his closet containing approximately $37,680 in cash and gold coins. Man suspects a nurse's assistant that was helping to take care of his sick wife.

Pebble Beach: On Bird Rock Road a man's Volvo was egged in the driveway of his home.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 11

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a light in an office on Monte Verde getting bright and then dimming repeatedly. Building secure, nothing further.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Assistance for CHP — report of a male throwing rocks at passing vehicles on Highway 1.

Carmel area: South of Carmel on Hwy. 1 at a Big Sur inn a manager reports that an ex-employee left the state without paying the inn back the money he owes them. Man had an agreement to pay the money over three months; he has not paid any money back at all.

Carmel area: A man, 48, was seen throwing rocks and dirt at passing cars at Hwy. 1 and San Luis Avenue. Two cars suffered minor damage to their vehicles. Man was placed under citizen's arrest by one of the victims who sustained damage to her car.

Carmel area: A woman, 38, on Via Nona Marie, reports that during a verbal argument with a man, 79, he squeezed her arm causing extreme pain.

Carmel area: At a campground in Big Sur, a woman drove her camper into the driveway and refused to leave. The manager wanted her arrested for trespassing. She has been told several times not to return; she attempted to resist arrest. A struggle ensued and then she was transported to county jail.

Carmel area: Manager of local drug store reports having a shop-lifter in custody: man reprimanded and released for taking a bag of raisins.

Carmel Valley: Woman asked that the Carmel freezes capital improvements to prepare for winter storms

By TAMARA GRIPPI

EXPECTING THE worst from Mother Nature this winter, the Carmel City Council decided to suspend all spending for street, building and park improvements to boost a reserve fund for storm repairs.

An extra $278,000 will increase the total emergency reserve account to $528,000, according to City Administrator Jere Kersnar.

Although the city has halted capital-improvement spending in the past, this is the first time such a measure has been taken in anticipation of storms, Kersnar said.

The halt of public works spending was authorized Tuesday by the Carmel City Council, which met for a first-quarter budget review.

City officials are worried in particular that storm drains — many of which were put in the ground 20 to 30 years ago — could fail from huge volumes of runoff, creating sinkholes on roads.

Water shooting out of corroded pipes can wipe out the dirt that supports the streets, causing street failures.

Kersnar thinks that the $500,000 should be enough to cover potential damage to any part of the city's infrastructure from winter storms. If a disaster is severe enough to run up a higher bill, then it would probably qualify for federal disaster funds, Kersnar said.

Besides storm drain repairs, officials are also worried about exposed bluffs and vulnerable trees that threaten private or public property.

This year, the city found out that a "patch-up" job on the bluff along Scenic Drive turned out to be a major repair project.

During the summer, the river stops well short of the mouth of the valley. By pumping water from the Coast Ranch and reducing upstream extractions, the river would flow further west and nearly reach the Carmel River Lagoon.

PROPOSAL

and point man on the proposed project, told The Pine Cone. "This is community service. He is being a good neighbor. People will ask why we are doing this. The reason is: We are doing this because we can."

According to Williams, Eastwood and his former wife Maggie Eastwood, a co-owner of the Coast Ranch, are well aware of the hardship caused by water rationing so they hope to do what they can to prevent or delay it.

The state has already fined Cal-Am $168,000 for failing to meet mandatory conservation measures, and has threatened to take over the Peninsula's water system.

Williams said Clint and Maggie Eastwood hope to prevent more fines, further water-reduction orders for the community, a ban on hook-ups or new mandatory rationing for water customers.

Because it is unlikely the community will be able to increase its water supply any time soon or reduce demand by as much as the state has ordered, innovative projects might "buy some time" with state decision-makers, Williams explained.

"We've all seen what rationing and moratoriums can do to a community," Williams said. "As the former mayor of Carmel, Clint knows first-hand about the problems caused by a water shortage."

Larry Foy, Cal-Am's general manager, confirms that Coast Ranch wells could be used to reduce upstream pumping. Fuerst stressed, however, that nobody knows how many wells the area near the mouth of the valley can handle.

When the Eastwoods bought the artichoke farm in 1994, they stated that their primary interest was flood control. They left the northern end of the property open as a floodway to help protect the Mission Fields neighborhood and invited the county to remove or lower portions of the south bank levee — work which has been partly completed.

Convince the state we're trying

Foy, meanwhile, was enthusiastic about the Eastwoods' offer. "It would give us the chance to create another couple of miles of river flow," Foy said. "If we can do this, the state might understand that we are really doing something for the environment."

Foy said the cost of drilling new production wells would run from $3 million to $3.5 million.

The Coast Ranch wells would then be the lowest pumping sites along Cal-Am's Carmel river system, which includes more than a dozen production wells.

Williams, who owns Carmel Development Co., unveiled the plan Monday evening before the MPWMD board, which did not vote on the offer.

The board, however, did hold a long public hearing on Cal-Am's request for a freeze on new water hook-ups, an unpopular idea that directors shied away from. The prospect of mandatory rationing has been equally unpopular, but could become a reality if the state insists it is necessary to save the river.

"The Eastwoods and my company have always looked for solutions that would allow us to avoid unnecessary rationing," Williams said. "Marc del Piero [a member of the State Water Resources Control Board] encouraged us to pursue the idea of lower-river wells — its an idea that Cal-Am has known for years would work, but they haven't had the sites to do it."

New twist on old idea

Fuerst agrees that the idea of concentrating as much pumping downstream as possible is hardly new.

If fact, six years ago, Cal-Am altered its pumping practices to make greater use of lower-river pumping sites. And the result was the extension of river flow during dry months by about a mile, Fuerst explained.

Around the same time, the river also and foresters, who injected massive doses of the deadly pitch canker fungus spores into thousands of Monterey pine trees they had growing in boxes. After each injection, the trees were allowed to grow for two months and then were dissected; those that showed fungus damage were rejected. The 56 that survived unscathed are precious indeed, constituting only 2 percent of the 2,425 trees injected by the pitch canker fungus. The cost to find the resistant trees: over $9,000 for each one.

(Six of the "super trees" were donated to Pacific Grove, Monterey and Carmel. Kelly says the two were planted at Harrison Memorial Library and Vista Lobos and both remain unscathed by the disease.)

The 50 remaining 'super trees' became the parents of about 1800 cuttings Lopez took in August. Trees cloned from cuttings have the identical genetic make-up of the resistant trees, and scientists hope they will repopulate the urban pine forest if it is destroyed by the pitch canker scourge.

But most of the clones did not cooperate. Lopez tried different strengths of rooting hormone (and no hormone at all), but 75 percent of the clones did not grow roots.

"I think the parent trees were stressed from being in containers for so long," he said. "And summer is not the best time to take cuttings." Lopez will try again with hundreds of new cuttings taken in the next few weeks from the parent trees, which he says are much healthier now that they are growing in the ground.

He is encouraged about the pine clones that did survive, and has high hopes that the 400 will continue to grow and be ready to replace dying landscape pines in Del Monte forest next year.

Pebble Beach forester Bud Lopez hopes these clones of healthy trees will be ready to transplant in the ground in three months.

Sharing research

Lopez and the Pebble Beach foresters are also sharing research with scientists from around the world who are worried about pine pitch canker invading their forests.

Monterey pine is the biggest timber product in New Zealand, and scientists there have successfully cloned trees for years. They select genetic stock for their size, shape and speedy growth.

A professor from the University of Waikato in New Zealand recently visited the Pebble Beach nursery to exchange information, as did a plant microbiologist from the Hebrew University of Jerusalem and two plant pathologists from Iowa State University. They took samples of the pitch canker fungus back to their lab in Ames, Iowa for further study.

The Pebble Beach Co. has also funded research on Huckleberry Hill by scientists from U.C. Berkeley, who also used pitch canker injections to find resistant trees in that genetically diverse pine forest — which sprang up after a fire burned that forest a decade ago. Berkeley has had about 60 percent rooting success on its Huckleberry Hill clones, according to Lopez.

Home Garden Clones

If local residents are lucky enough to own a healthy Monterey pine with no sign of pitch canker, they may want to try to grow their own pine clones at home. Lopez said now is the best time to take cuttings, and his research shows that this method works best:

- Cut about 3 inches of light green new growth from the tips of branches.
- Dip the cut ends in highly concentrated powdered rooting hormone. (Lopez used Hormex Rooting Powder at a 4.5 percent concentration per volume. The rest is plain talc.)
- Pot the cuttings in 80 percent perlite, 20 percent peat moss and keep moist but not soggy.
- When the roots are about an inch long, which can take three or four months, transplant the clones into gallon cans of good soil. When the seedling gets a strong root base (in another three months) and the rains have thoroughly wet the ground, the clone can be planted outside.

Monterey pines grow very fast, up to six feet a year, according to Lopez.

Council sets April ballot on room tax hike

■ $165,000 in revenue from TOT increase more precious after Measure B defeat

By PAUL WOLF

WITH THE stress of the failed ambulance tax measure still showing, the Carmel City Council has agreed to schedule an April ballot measure to validate the half-percent room tax increase of 1995.

The council is being forced to the ballot because of new state rules that require voter approval of tax increases.

At stake is roughly $165,000 per year, according to Carmel Financial Services Coordinator Sandi Davenport. That sum is a small part of the total $3.7 million in projected revenue from hostelry tax this fiscal year.

Hazdovac

"There are plenty of ways we can spend this money," said Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac, noting that the city's general fund will now have to cover the $150,000 or $200,000 to preserve Carmel's membership in the Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance (CRFA).

On November 4, local voters chose not to subsidize Carmel's CRFA membership by rejecting Measure B, the parcel tax question that failed by 12 votes.

After their tense deliberations Tuesday, council members split 3-2 (with Barbara Livingston and Marshall Hydorn dissenting) on whether to schedule the April 14 measure.

A yes vote would legitimize the room tax rate hike from 10 percent to 10.5 percent.

Also on Monday, the council voted 5-0 to schedule a ballot measure to change the way the business license tax is calculated in Carmel.

The revenue-neutral change would replace a 25-year-old flat tax system (e.g. $100 annually for professionals, $75 for contractors) with a formula that matches the tax size with the earnings of the business.

At last count, Carmel had 1,098 business license holders, according to Kersnar. Current revenue from business licenses is about $375,000 annually, he said.

Even though the business license change would not bring in more money for the city, some business owners would pay less while others would pay far more. Consequently, a ballot measure is necessary.

Proposition 218 of 1996 requires all general tax increases to be put before the electorate. Even before Prop. 218, special tax measures needed a two-thirds majority.

All five council members acknowledged the city is under somewhat more financial stress now because it must continue shouldering the burden of the increasingly expensive ambulance service.

Hazdovac, Mayor Ken White and Councilman Bob Fischer agreed that the city must try to keep all its room tax revenue to ensure that the city won't have to cut services.

Dissenters Hydorn (who owns a local inn) and Livingston argued that the tax hike should never have been approved and thus should not be validated. Because the original motivation for approving the rate increase two-and-a-half years ago was to provide money for the Carmel Business Association, the tax was, in effect, a "special tax" requiring a two-thirds vote.

In the spring of 1995, Livingston opposed the rate increase; Hydorn was not yet on the council.

Technically, the tax increase is not a special tax because the council is not committed to spending the revenue for any given program.

Hazdovac stated she thought the $100,000 a year the CBA has received from the city in each of the last three years, could well be eliminated given the competing programs that could use the money.

Dina Ruiz to vacate anchor chair at KSBW TV-8

Baby Morgan tops list of 'special assignments'

By KIRSTIE WILDE

"I'M JUST going to throw in the towel and be with Morgie."

With that, popular anchorwoman Dina Ruiz announced yesterday that she is retiring from the grind of TV news, a move that didn't surprise her friends, co-workers or husband Clint Eastwood.

"My friends have said, 'I think you're the only one who hasn't marveled at how long you hung in there," Ruiz told The Pine Cone. "I started thinking, gosh I can't keep up with everything. I can't keep up with Clint and be a good mom. I suddenly realized, jeez, I'm not the primary breadwinner; what am I doing?"

Ruiz began her career at KSBW in late 1991 when she was 27. She landed the week-day anchoring job six months later and helped the station continue its longtime dominance in the ratings. She married Eastwood March 31, 1996 and brought daughter Morgan into the world 11 months ago.

'She's playing with the bug spray!'

As any parent of a toddler knows, life can be chaotic even without a high-powered job, an international film star for a husband and weekly requests for one's services on panels, at fundraisers and for community service. During her interview with The Pine Cone, Ruiz bolted from the phone when Morgan:

- Bonked her head on the hardwood floor.
- Dropped her highchair tray on her toe.
- Managed to pry open the 'no-no' cupboard.

"My God she's playing with the bug spray!" cried Ruiz as she scurried to the rescue. "Oh never mind, it's just Mr. Muscle," came her tinny voice from somewhere in the Eastwood house.

The idea of taking a breather from her job seemed very good at that moment.

"I feel a 100 percent that it's the right thing to do," she said. "But the thought of not seeing Jim (Vanderzwaan) Dennis (Lehnen) and Dan (Green) every day makes me sad. You know how newsrooms are full of smart, sarcastic people with a sick sense of humor? You're laughing all day, you're expanding your brain. I really love that place."

Ruiz decided last summer to call it quits, but didn't think to ask if she could stay on part-time or for occasional special projects. "I figured they'd just can me," she said.

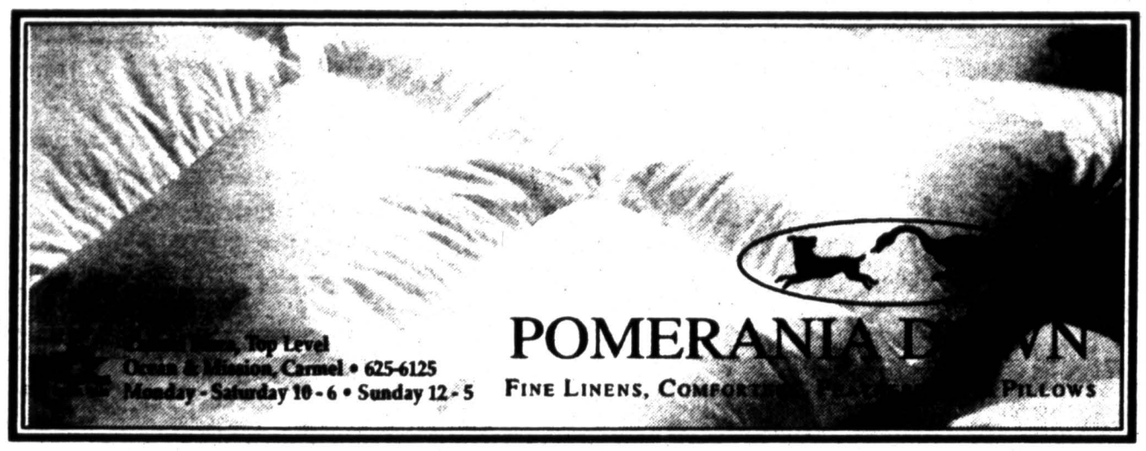
'I started thinking, gosh I can't keep up with everything. I can't keep up with Clint and be a good mom ...'

But KSBW News Director Laura Clark did-not blow her top when Ruiz gave her notice October 1, even though Clark is faced with an unprecedented turnover in on-air talent. (Three anchors have announced they're leaving, and sources among the remaining newscasters told The Pine Cone that at least two more will exit soon.)

Ruiz said she and Clark are working out a deal where she would do special assignments, maybe fill-in anchor work for vacation time (or somebody else's maternity leave.)

For the near future, however, Ruiz plans to catch up on her sleep. And to start having the time of her life.

But she's going to miss the Savannah premiere of her husband's new movie, "Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil," because she'll be working. Ruiz' last day on the set at KSBW is next week, the night before Thanksgiving.



WIN an exciting 8-day Mexico Vacation!

ACLU-sponsored forum takes aim at new Herald owners

By KIERSTEN MCCUTCHAN

THERE WAS plenty of emotional "venting" at an community forum this week about the recent Knight Ridder takeover of the Monterey County Herald.

The auditorium at Monterey Peninsula College was packed Wednesday night with around 200 people, many of whom were supporters of friends who lost their jobs, members of the public and retired Herald workers who are concerned about the newspaper's relationship to the community, and people who objected to what they said is recent Herald "censorship" of letters to the editor.

Fears were also expressed that the Herald may want to break the local newspaper union, and that Knight Ridder may have the same thing in mind for their San Jose paper, the Mercury News.

The panel, assembled by the Monterey County chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, consisted of Assemblyman Fred Keeley, ACLU attorneys Michelle Welsh and Richard Criley, newspaper union representative Luther Jackson, former Herald employee Ken Schultz and writer Rod Holmgren.

Assemblyman Keeley told the audience that the role of a "free press in a democracy cannot be overstated," but at the same time legislation is needed to protect "worker's rights."

Welsh asked the audience if they thought the K-R takeover was lawful. "Can they do that?" she asked. The answer, Welsh said, is that K-R has "operated just within the bounds of a lot of different laws."

Criley criticized K-R, saying "We have seen a community institution turned into a private business." He also protested that a benefited from rainfall that ended the five-year drought, Fuerst said.

CAL-AM

He agreed with Foy and Williams that Eastwood's concept could lengthen the river flow, but believes some kind of feasibility study is necessary to make sure there aren't negative impacts from the new wells.

MPWMD Chairman Dick Ely said he would like to see more than a feasibility study; he will urge an environmental impact report to determine the risks of salt-water intrusion caused by more lower-river pumping. "I am not as enamored with this project as everyone else is," he told the newspaper.

Williams said five wells could pump as much as 3,000 acre-feet of water a year from the Coast Ranch. Fuerst said he could not confirm those numbers, which he said may be overoptimistic.

Extracting more water from new wells in the lower river wouldn't change the size of Cal-Am's annual water deficit of 10,730 acre-feet. But the state water board is interested in eliminating water damage as well as cutting water use from the river.

An enhanced river habitat might cause the state board to be more forgiving in the coming months as Cal-Am, the water district, the cities and residents continue their search for alternative water sources such as dams, desalination plants and underground storage.

Cal-Am is pinning its hopes on its proposed 24,000-acre-foot Carmel River Dam and reservoir, a no-growth version of the project that was rejected by Peninsula voters in November 1995. That project is scheduled for completion in 2004, according to MPWMD Senior Planner Henrietta Stern.

Williams likened Eastwood's concept to refinancing a loan: The loan amount is the same, but there is more time to pay it off. Said Williams: "The state's primary concern is not the amount of water being taken from the river, but the fact that we are killing the river."

COUNCIL

Crews from the Don Chapin Company wrapped up repairs on the bluff between Eleventh and Twelfth just days before the waves came lapping up on the rocks, said Public Works Director Jim Cullem.

Workers shored up the cliff with a pile of three to five ton boulders. For now, the only work that remains is to cover up the bottom level of rocks with as much sand as possible, Cullem said.

The city still has to decide what to do with the upper one-fourth of the pile area.

The work that's already been done should be able to handle 90 percent of problems this winter, Cullem said.

HAVEN IN THE GARDEN

■ Carmel's first "safe garden" for kids and horses with a turbulent past

By KIERSTEN MCCUTCHAN

GARDENS ARE often known for their healing qualities. Whether it's the congenial bunches of flowers, the smell of the soil, or the feel of a soft green leaf in the palm of your hand, a garden can almost always coax the quiet, reflective side from the garden-goer.

And often with reflection comes the gift of healing, say the directors of the LittleWings Garden.

Until now, there has never been a special one just for kids and the horses that come from violent families and backgrounds. And it is here, at the LittleWings Garden, that a kind of flora and fauna therapy begins.

The garden came to fruition, because sometimes, according to the directors of the LittleWings program, it takes more than time to heal these kinds of wounds.

Becca Sansom and Jean Lucia, social workers and seniors at California State University Monterey Bay, believe that children and animals are treated the same in this world, often sharing a fate where they are powerless to control a situation. They wanted to make a place where abused creatures could go; they wanted to make a safe place, a healing place — they envisioned a foliated haven.

Sansom says the whole idea behind LittleWings is to educate the public about abuse that happens with children and animals. "We want to teach that everything has value," she says.

She said the six-year-old RedWings Horse Sanctuary, across from Point Lobos, asked Sansom and her partner Lucia if they would brainstorm and come up with something that would be therapeutic to both the children and their hoofed friends.

'Safe garden'

Sansom says they got their idea to create a "safe garden" in Carmel after attending a three-day seminar in Sonoma County called "Gardens for Children." It was here that Sansom and Lucia saw how a garden, started four years ago by the Sonoma County Humane Society and the San Francisco Child Abuse Council, could bloom into a safehold for 150 children.

The groups come from different agencies in Monterey County: government foster care agencies, drug-abuse programs and non-violence programs. LittleWings, so far, has had one group of mothers and children in to take a respite in the garden — planting, sitting, breathing, holding their children's hands in a quiet, drug-free environment. Sansom says the first garden party was successful. They plan to have the next group, from the Seaside YWCA, this weekend.

LittleWings Director Becca Sansom and Program Coordinator Jean Lucia share a quiet moment with their friend Angel, "the garden pony" — purchased from a slaughterhouse for $28 with hooves so long she could barely walk — who is now healing nicely.

Sansom and Lucia think the kids can probably really identify with the horses there. Each time the children come, Sansom and Lucia say, they get to hear the story of how a particular horse was saved, and how the horse was cared for and eventually learned how to love again.

There's a little pony there that Sansom and Lucia call the "garden pony," but whose true name is Angel. She was bought from a slaughterhouse for $28. Her hooves were so overgrown that she could not walk. Now she is at the point where she can hobble. For this she gets kisses every day

Rare Finds on the Peninsula

David Lee Galleries

David Lee's serene landscapes, luminous florals, graceful birds and exotic fish have earned him a leading position in the art world.

Meet this renowned artist and view his newest paintings on Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 22-23. Occasion is a special appearance by Lee at his Carmel venue: the David Lee Galleries on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh, Carmel.

"I do not copy nature," he says. "I interpret it. Most of my notes and sketches are strictly mental. I will 'memorize' a scene by painting it in my mind. Then, when I return to my studio, my art becomes the interpretation of a very personal remembrance."

Hours for the special show are 4 to 8 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. Private appointments with Mr. Lee are available by calling (408) 622-9992 or toll-free (800) 879-0711.

Mail Boxes Etc.

Just in time to meet the demands of the holidays, a new Mail Boxes Etc. is now open at David and Forest in the Fairway Shopping Center, Pacific Grove.

Stop by the Pacific Grove store and receive a coupon for three free color copies.

Expect the same level of service supplied by owners Jim and Jill Sleeper at their other Mail Boxes Etc. locations: 225 Crossroads Blvd., Carmel, and 798 Lighthouse Ave., New Monterey.

Bob Shepner, manager, and Howard Jones, long-time employees from the Carmel MBE center, are anxious to provide quality service to the community.

"People can count on a knowledgeable staff, people who really care," asserts Jill. "We really work with people, find out their needs, and ship items to their destination in a reasonable time at a reasonable price."

Indeed, Mail Boxes, Etc. has shipped it all — irreplaceable race car parts around the world, inter-museum shipments, and once, Jill recalls, a quantity of feathers.

They can pack and ship a child's gift or an estate's worth of household goods.

Your holidays will be made easier thanks to Mail Boxes, Etc. Their color copiers are state-of-the-art and ideal for producing a memorable family calendar. The stores offer computer rental time, to get that holiday newsletter in the mail.

Southwest Roundup

Bring a bit of ranch indoors with help from Southwest Roundup. Jane Merrill opened this resource for pine furniture and decorative home accessories. The entire inventory is handcrafted in Mexico by artisans, many of them third and fourth generation furniture craftsmen.

Southwest Roundup features furniture with rustic, ranch stylings and hardware that is all handmade. Another feature is furniture crafted from antique hacienda doors. It must be seen to be appreciated.

Upscale is the word for the iron, clay and glass accessories that bring a finishing touch to the collection.

Custom orders are welcome on furniture designs. Southwest Roundup offers "custom roundup" shopping in Mexico for specific items requested by clients..

The Southwest Roundup collection can be viewed by appointment only. To learn more, call 726-7191.

Tailoring by Joseph

Devotees of Joseph DiRocco's expert tailoring will find that his Crossroads shop has grown and the selection expanded. Long recognized as the master tailor in this region, DiRocco has added Clint Eastwood's line of golf sportswear and other ready-to-wear items to his inventory.

Tailoring by Joseph is at 122 Crossroads Blvd. in Carmel. It is stocked with bolts and swatches of rich, imported fabrics, including Loro Piana cashmeres, fine gabardines, English woolens and more. Of course, DiRocco, who entered the tailoring trade at age 9 in his native Sicily, can custom tailor clothing of any kind for men and women.

"I get satisfaction when I make something, and our customers keep coming back," says DiRocco.

His shop is becoming further recognized as the source for custom shirts, Sansabelt slacks and men's accessories, neckwear and men's hosiery by Polifroni/Milano.

Find out what's new at Tailoring by Joseph. It's open 10 to 6 Monday through Saturday and noon to 4 p.m. Sunday. Call 625-5641.

building on that list is Flanders Mansion, according to Carmel Planning Director Brian Roseth.

The application was submitted by Save Sunset, which favors a remodel but not a demolition and complete reconstruction. Kent Seavey, a preservation consultant active with Save Sunset, said he favors an "adaptive reuse" of the theater to improve acoustics but leave the structure intact.

The group approached the state commission by proposing that only the theater be listed. But state officials determined that it didn't make sense to isolate the theater from the rest of its 1926 building.

Eager to keep their options open for a number of different kinds of projects, Carmel Mayor Ken White and City Administrator Jere Kersnar asked state commissioners to take no action until the advantages and disadvantages of the designation could be fully understood.

'Firm ally'

"The state has agreed with us that the building is undeniably of historic value," said Enid Sales of Save Sunset. "We have a very firm ally in the state."

Sales' comments notwithstanding, the state commission did not consider the future of the building, only its history.

In its Oct. 17 issue, The Pine Cone reported that neither a state nor federal listing would automatically stop a demolition from being carried out. However, such designations would stand in the way of the city's ability to receive state or federal funding for the project, according to officials with the State Office of Historic Preservation.

White said he is disappointed because state or federal funding may well be needed to pay for the $20 million to $25 million project. In fact, White said the city has already had conversations with Rep. Sam Farr, D-Carmel, about the availability of federal money.

The private group, Sunset Center for the Arts, is currently negotiating with the city to determine how each should contribute to the project.

Sunset Center for the Arts president Nancy Doolittle said the state designation won't change its mission or approach to fund raising.

Late last month, the non-profit announced that it had hired a team of consultants to investigate the possibility of creating a world-class facility while preserving the exterior of the historic building.

White said he is dismayed that Sales, Roberts and Seavey pushed for the state designation and federal nomination at a time when a compromise appears so close at hand.

Kersnar added that locals should have been given the chance to decide if the building qualifies as a local historic place. He called the Save Sunset effort "an end-run around our local process."

At the very least, the state commission's decision is of considerable symbolic significance to project opponents, who have been greatly outnumbered by the city's elected, appointed and staff officials. Right down the line, they have voted for the demolition/reconstruction concept known as the "BOOR/A Mitigated" plan.

Marina man takes a drunken fall, sues bar for serving him

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE FAMILIAR story of young people sheepishly walking into bars, hoping they won't get carded took an interesting twist in one local incident: A 20-year-old man is suing Doc Ricketts Lab in Monterey for allegedly serving him the alcohol he ordered.

The lawsuit alleges that a year ago, 20-year-old Brian Bellem of Marina was served "copious" amounts of alcohol before he left the bar and fell from the outside wooden staircase onto the hard wood landing below, fracturing his hip.

The lawsuit contends that Doc Ricketts and the Cannery Row Land Company which owns the property, are responsible for Bellem's "serious personal injuries" from the accident.

According to the lawsuit, the responsibility for getting drunk does not rest with Bellem; it is those two businesses that should take the blame for what happened to him that fateful night last November. He claims the club is at fault for serving him the alcohol and the land owner at fault for having too short a handrail on the stairs.

So far, neither the Cannery Row Company nor Doc Ricketts Lab have been served with papers, although both businesses are aware of the lawsuit.

"No news is good news," said Gary Alfson, vice president of marketing and property management for the Cannery Row Company. "Until it comes to us, we're probably not going to do anything about it."

As far as Alfson knows, his company has never been presented with medical bills from Bellem.

According to Dean Pulgarin, the owner of Doc Ricketts, Bellem wasn't even in the club that night. Pulgarin declined to comment further on the case.

Although not named in the suit, Dick O'Kane, who holds the master lease on the property, said "we're going to get into the thing one way or another."

The lawsuit goes on to say that Bellem's injuries required medical treatment, forced him to lose time from work and "caused him to experience excruciating pain and suffering."

Bellem "sustained shock and injury to his body, health, strength and nervous system resulting in permanent disability."

Bellem declined to talk to the Pine Cone and referred questions to his attorney, Timothy Hanly. Messages left for Hanly were not returned.

from Sansom and Lucia, and regular visits from the blacksmith.

The LittleWings directors think that nurturing the connection between animals, plants and the self is a way to "break the violence cycle." Sansom says, "Often children who have been abused will become abusers. There are statistics saying that this often begins with a family pet. Then they turn into abusive adults. We hope to show them a different way."

LittleWings trots along the same way RedWings does: lots of fundraising. Sansom says so far nothing has been badly needed. "Everything's been donated, including the fencing. Right now, we really need plants and garden tools."

Those wishing to contact LittleWings about volunteering, donating or taking part in the garden process can phone 624-8464.

Outstanding Service Organization for its countless hours dedicated to Meals on Wheels, Reading is Fundamental and the Great Monterey Squid Festival.

The Pebble Beach Co. was named Outstanding Corporate Philanthropist for the $500,000 it has given for everything from emergency assistance to victims of earthquakes and floods, to supporting the arts and environmental education, and accepting Colin Powell's challenge to increase volunteerism through public service advertisements on TV and in newspapers like this one.

(KSBW anchorman Dan Green, who acted as Master of Ceremonies, took the opportunity to speak out against those who criticized the advertisements, saying, "When we are called wrong for joining forces with a corporation like the Pebble Beach Co. in promoting volunteerism in our own community, then we're wrong and you can tell Sheriff Norm Hicks to take us all off to jail.")

As Pebble Beach Co.'s Mark Verbonich accepted the award and surveyed the crowd of people who have come to him for funding in the past, he said, "It's very daunting, to say the least. I hope to make it out of this room alive!"

Chapmans' vision

The Philanthropist of the Year award went to the foundation set up by the late Bill and Adeline Chapman. Col. Chapman, one-time mayor of Pacific Grove and veteran of both World Wars, cared passionately about education. When he died, his wife had the vision to set up continuing scholarships for students all over the Peninsula.

"Bubba Beyah, the outstanding football running back who has thrilled many a fan at RLS this year, would not be at Stevenson without the Chapman Foundation," said Al Crosby. "What an example and inspiration Bill and Adeline were to us all."

But the award that brought all the philanthropists to their feet in the ballroom was that of Humanitarian of the Year, which went to the weary 79-year-old woman in the denim work shirt and jeans who didn't give fantastic sums of money to charity. Nancy Costello gave years of her life, and the muscles in her aching back, to help farm workers from Watsonville to King City.

Costello's typical day begins at 7:30 at The Crossroads Safeway, where she loads her truck with outdated milk, cheese and bread. "Sometimes the homeless men who live under the bridge help me, but when they don't show up I do it myself," she told The Pine Cone. Children at All Saints' school bag hundreds of pounds of beans each week to add to Costello's supply, and churches all over the area donate toys, clothing and money to her cause during the holidays. Costello hauls it all to the labor camps, and her last delivery is after dark.

She's been called "Saint Nancy," but she snorts at that. She's less than angelic to the bums who sometimes steal food from her truck. "I have no use for lazy drunks. They spend their money on vodka and I'm supposed to buy them food? Saint my foot!"

Enjoy full Life Care retirement living in Pacific Grove.

Retirement living hasn't slowed down Don and Irene Slaiter. Both say they're as active today as they were during their careers. As volunteer docents for Bay Net, they support their love of marine life on the Monterey Peninsula and share their knowledge with others at Coast Guard Pier and Lover's Point near their home at Canterbury Woods.

Don and Irene enjoy good food and friends in the gracious and open dining room at Canterbury Woods.

Don and Irene also find the time and energy to be certified American Red Cross volunteers, ready to accept a call for help anytime they're needed.

When not volunteering, Don takes golf lessons and enjoys line dancing with Irene and other Canterbury Woods residents.

"We're so lucky," says Irene, "and so happy to be living here in comfort with so many other active and interesting people. We feel secure in knowing that at our home at Canterbury Woods we're guaranteed comprehensive lifetime medical care."

Ads R Us — or — The odd-vertising age

DON'T BOTHER me. I'm sitting here trying to figure out why I would want a "Caddy that zigs."

As far as I can tell, someone at General Motors has inhaled too many gasoline fumes. Have you — has anyone — figured out what a ZIGGING car will do?

Another current Cadillac radio commercial has a sober-sounding fellow saying, "The compass on the new DeVille has helped me a number of times."

Yeah, right! The guy has never paid any attention to his wife's helpful directions, and now he's going to take the word of an assembly-line robot? I don't think so.

Commercials, whether we like it or not, are a part of our lives. As I've often pointed out to the man asleep on the sofa, we can actually LEARN things from watching or listening to ads. For instance, it's "a common misconception among raccoons" that Lazy Boy makes only recliners.

Yes, those adorable little night-stalkers have worked their way onto our television screens and right into our hearts. So much so that the other day when I chanced across a raccoon sprawled across our woodpile in the full light of day, I thought of asking him if there were any other common misconceptions I should know about.

However, this particular raccoon was not looking too chipper. I clapped my hands and tried to shoo him off. He just slumped down on his belly and looked at me. Oh-oh, rabies, thought I, and dashed in to report a "sick or injured" raccoon to the SPCA. By the time I'd pushed the last voice-mail button, my little buddy had wandered off, no doubt to tell his friends that emergency service for raccoons ain't all it's cracked up to be.

Odd-vertising

More odd-vertising: This mixed message in Elle magazine for a perfume called Fetish #16 — "Apply generously to your neck so he can smell the scent as you shake your head 'no.'" And we wonder why men are so hopelessly confused.

My own preference in scent is Chantilly, an inexpensive, inoffensive, boring little cologne that suggests only that I bathe daily, am middle-aged, and have no communicable diseases. Unlike the high-powered scratch-and-sniff pages they insert in Vanity Fair, Chantilly will not kill the earwigs in my mailbox.

As long as I'm telling personal secrets, I may as well confess publicly that I have long been a customer of an entirely adequate lipstick which sells for $1 at a number of retail stores, is sometimes even on sale for 69 cents. This, of course, goes against the conventional wisdom that says women will pay any amount in the name of beauty.

Unlike more expensive lipsticks with hues like "Lavender Lust" or "Peach Parfait," this maker simply uses numbers. I am a "505" girl myself, but I have friends who are definitely "528s." All of us are quite smug about the money we save on cosmetics, but we have one complaint. The brand calls itself "Wet 'n' Wild" (please don't laugh), and this flamboyant, totally unsuitable name is splashed in gold on every tube, legible for even the poorest vision.

Despite this drawback, we Wet 'n' Wild users are legion. Our cause is good. Our budgets are firm.

King size

I try not to be indelicate in this column, but I have to ask: When did it become commonplace to buy toilet paper in an industrial-size package of 36 ROLLS??? I can remember that, as a young bride, I hoped the grocery clerk would discreetly put my FOUR-pack at the bottom of the bag so that it wouldn't show.

Speaking of which, I wouldn't be the consumer reporter I purport to be if I didn't explain why you just can't seem to get your eyeglasses clean these days. Many brands of facial tissue are now treated with a lotion that's supposed to keep your nose from getting sore. You wipe your glasses, you get smudges — simple as that.

And before I leave you, let me share just one more ad I spotted in the classified of that Other Paper:

"Entertainers. Talented and beautiful. Needed for escort service. Good pay. No experience necessary."

Hey, sounds like the perfect job for stretching that Social Security check a wee bit further. Just don't forget the Wet 'n' Wild.

Other business

It's time once again, dear friends, for nominations for Carmel-by-the-Sea's Unsung Heroes of 1997, those people who do good works with never a thought for thanks.

You'd think that in such a small town their numbers would be small, but just since 1990, when the program was established, there have been 31 men and women so honored. You can probably think of a few more.

Pick up a nomination form at City Hall. Deadline for nominations is December 31st.

EPA to tighten tap water standards to fight parasites

How Cal-Am water stacks up

By KIRSTIE WILDE

THE ENVIRONMENTAL Protection Agency has announced new requirements for large water companies to eliminate 80 percent of the turbidity (cloudiness caused by particles) currently allowed in drinking water.

The new standards are expected by next November.

One of the reasons for the stricter rules is that turbidity has been associated with parasites that can cause nausea, vomiting and diarrhea, especially in children.

In a recent article, the New York Times reported that studies in Philadelphia have linked turbidity in the water to emergency room visits by children suffering from unexplained intestinal ailments. The study was done by the Harvard School of Public Health and the Federal EPA.

The stricter EPA rules were prompted by an outbreak of the parasite Cryptosporidium in Milwaukee in 1993, which killed scores of people, even though the water system complied with all federal clean-water guidelines at the time.

According to Walter Wong of the Monterey County Environmental Health Department, there has been only one case of Cryptosporidium in the county in the past five years.

"It was a family in Carmel Valley, and we were able to trace the problem to Mexico," he told The Pine Cone.

He said it's very possible that the parasites exist in surface water around the county, and river or lake water should never be ingested without boiling first.

Can Cal-Am meet new standards?

The Pine Cone contacted chemist Roger Ward, water quality supervisor for Cal-Am water, to see if the Peninsula water supply will be able to measure up to the strict new proposed turbidity standards, and the new filtration required to remove Cryptosporidium parasites. The good news is our water already meets the higher turbidity standards 95 percent of the time, according to Ward.

He also explained what Cal-Am is doing to make sure harmful parasites like "Crypto" and Giardia are not hiding in our water.

"Since July we have taken monthly samples to our lab and monitored for viruses, Crypto and Giardia," he said. "Nobody knows how many Cryptosporidium cysts it takes to cause illness, so right now we are just required to search for them, and report numbers to a national data bank. So far, we have not found any at all. Our sources are pretty pristine, and our treatment process is a good barrier. In the Missouri river they are finding tens of thousands of cysts in their water samples."

There are some who are at very high risk for infection — elderly who are very weak or people with AIDS — who could be killed by parasites in the water. Ward says those people should never take chances; they should boil all their water for a full minute, before drinking it.

Complaints of cloudiness

Ward does get complaints about cloudy water from folks in Carmel, as well as other areas of Cal-Am's service area. He says it nearly always turns out to be air — extremely tiny (and harmless) bubbles. There are also isolated cases of discolored water, usually caused by rust from the inside of old cast-iron pipes.

"It's just iron, and does not hurt you," he said.

For people who buy bottled water because they feel it is better than tap water, Ward says "You can't necessarily trust bottled water. You don't know the source and you don't know what its treatment process is."

Aspiring baton wavers of any age invited to be guest conductors

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

CLOSET CONDUCTORS — those who play "air baton" in the privacy of home — or even professionals, are invited to conduct in public during Youth Music Monterey's Holiday Playathon from 1 to 3 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 30 in The Barnyard Shopping Village.

The annual free open-air concert — featuring the Youth and Honors Orchestras of Monterey County — presents young artists from eight to 20 years of age performing seasonal music in the gardens in front of Thunderbird Bookshop.

Executive director Amy Woolf Crain says that the ability to read music is optional for guest conductors. Those wishing to accept the invitation to conduct should R.S.V.P. by telephoning 375-1992. Deadline is Wednesday, Nov. 26.

Prior to the concert, student musicians of the Youth and Honors Orchestras solicit financial assistance from friends, family and local businesses to support music services provided for Monterey County young people through Youth Music Monterey.

The Barnyard provides prize incentives to these young people.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE of JOHN ROBERT ORYALL
#MP13849

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of JOHN ROBERT ORYALL.

A PETITION has been filed by JOHN CARROLL in the Superior Court of California, County of Monterey.

THE PETITION requests that JOHN CARROLL be appointed as personal represenative to administer the estate of the decendent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice of consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held: on Dec. 5, 1997 at 9:30 a.m. in Dept. A, located at 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, Ca. 93940.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

My Dinner With André

■ Carmelites learn art of cooking, Casanova style

By TAMARA GRIPPI

INSTEAD OF sitting in a restaurant to enjoy dinner and wine, some locals would rather step behind the silver doors of Casanova's kitchen to discover the secret of good food.

As I joined a cooking class there last week, my eyes were opened to a whole new world of carefully timed sautés and delicately placed seasonings. Ordinarily when I go out to eat, I never give a moment's thought to the complicated efforts that create the fine food on my plate.

FIRST PERSON

As the class began I realized that perhaps I should have signed myself up for remedial cooking. Sometimes the bad habits of frozen dinners and instant food can be difficult to break.

Not to worry, said our teacher for the evening, André Françot. Even professionals can always learn something new about cooking, he said.

As Françot led us into one of the kitchens, we marveled at the glorious sights and sounds: An immense silver cauldron, steaming like mad, a 20-gallon tub of butter, that would be used up in three days, Françot said.

Grippi

For our first course, Françot showed us the fine points of making New England Clam Chowder: The potato chunks should remain whole, tender, but not mushy. Several times Françot tested the potatoes with a knife. "Not quite. A little bit more," he said.

"In cooking you have to keep on trying and tasting to make sure it's there," he said. "There's no guessing."

While we waited on the potatoes in clam chowder, we watched a dramatic flame shoot into the air from a pan on a neighboring stove. The cook was sautéing shellfish for paella.

"I don't think my sautés ever looked that good," said Judi Rawson, one of my fellow students.

Too timid

"I think we're too timid in the kitchen," said Gilda Soulé, my Pine Cone compatriot.

Timid or not, we learned that the main dish of the evening would take precise timing. The Fillet of Sole Amandine needed to be cooked only for 30 seconds each side.

"People have a tendency to overcook fish and they lose the juice of the meat," Françot explained. "Don't be afraid to undercook the fish and keep it moist."

As we sat down to enjoy our feast we wondered how a kitchen staff manages to prepare the countless number of specialty meals ordered every evening.

Françot explained that each kitchen has a carefully organized system to split up the work. One cook does all the sautéing while other cooks are assigned to take care of the boiling and the appetizers.

Didier Dutertre, the executive chef of Casanova, plans all the menus, Françot explained.

Restaurant as theater

A restaurant is like a theater, said Françot, the former owner of L'Escargot Restaurant. "The waiters and cooks are the actors and every night is a different show."

For the grand finale of our private 'show,' we headed back to the kitchen to whip up the dessert — Pear Gratin with Sauternes. Broiling the pears in the cream sauce proved to be another tricky step. Françot skillfully showed us how to cook the cream sauce just long enough to make sure the sugar had carmelized.

After we finished off the last bites of our Pear Gratin, my classmates were enthused about trying out the recipes at home. Françot says that many of his students return to learn more recipes.

"Some people have been coming for 10 weeks," he said. "They're creating their own little cookbooks."

As talented as he is in the kitchen, Françot may be starting a new career one of these days. "I always wanted to do a movie about the restaurant business and what happens behind the (kitchen) doors," he said.

Françot teaches cooking classes from 6 to 9 p.m. every Tuesday night at Casanova. The cost is $45

Gallery owner faces charges of burglary, embezzlement

By TAMARA GRIPPI

CARMEL POLICE wrapped up a four-month investigation this week when a Carmel gallery owner was charged with five counts of grand theft by embezzlement and three counts of burglary.

Stephen Wood, 64, owner of the Collector's Gallery on San Carlos, failed to pay five of his clients when he sold the paintings that he had taken on consignment.

He is charged with burglary because he entered places with the intent to take the paintings without paying the owners, police say.

Wood's lawyer, Lawrence Biegel, said that he entered a plea of not guilty to all the charges. "I don't believe when he did any of these things that he had a criminal intent," Biegel said.

Back in August police learned that a 75-year-old woman was having difficulty getting back a painting that she had consigned to Wood.

Wood allegedly told the police that he had left the painting in the woman's carport while she screamed at him.

Carmel Police Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras and Lou Wolting, an investigator from the D.A.'s office, followed a tip to Merced and found the painting, which had been sold to a couple there.

After obtaining a search warrant, Police seized Wood's business records and found four other victims.

Wood was released on $25,000's bail, provided that he give his full account of paintings for sale, Poitras said. According to police, the fraud adds up to between $40,000 and $50,000.

"We want to make sure debts get paid as promptly as possible," Biegel said.

The preliminary hearing is scheduled for Dec. 17.

Family remembers him as thoughtful man with love for animals

By TAMARA GRIPPI

LARRY ARNESE was a man with an adventurous spirit, who was willing to work as hard as he could to make his dreams come true.

Arnese, a resident of Pebble Beach and the former president of the Ed J. Lyng bean and seed brokerage, died of heart failure Oct. 30. He was 67.

Orphaned at a young age, Arnese was raised by his older siblings in Sutter Creek, Ca. At age 12, Arnese heard the call of the wild and spent a whole summer camping by himself at Silver Lake. That summer, he lived "like Huckleberry Finn," fishing during the day and eating canned beans for dinner.

OBITUARY

While Arnese dreamed of life's excitement, he was willing to work extremely hard at a young age. In the dark morning hours before his high school classes started, Arnese made deliveries for an Italian bakery.

Fresh out of high school, he went with a friend up to Alaska and found work on the railroad — by fudging a little about his age.

He met his wife Joan while working in a cafeteria at Modesto Junior College. He was drafted during the Korean War and spent two years in the finance offices at Fort Ord and Camp Roberts.

Secret of success

Hard work was always the secret to Arnese's success. "He could never understand why everyone else didn't want to work that hard," Mrs. Arnese remembers. He worked his way up from office manager to president of the Ed J. Lyng Co. of Modesto.

Throughout his life, Arnese kept his eagerness to explore the unknown. In 1963, while seeking a place to grow winter sunflowers for his company, Arnese went on a trek in the South African bush, encountering numerous wild animals.

"It was a really thrilling thing to do at that time," Mrs. Arnese said.

Arnese traveled the world with his wife. The couple took trips to New Zealand, Australia, Southeast Asia, Singapore, Bali, the British Isles, Norway, Spain and the Mediterranean.

Arnese eventually negotiated the sale of Lyng's to the Northrup-King Seed Company. He then became western division manager for Northrup-King and was elected to the board.

Always a busy man, Arnese retired in 1978 to become one of California's first developers of mini-warehouses. In 1989, the Arneses moved to Pebble Beach.

After retiring, Arnese put his experience to work for the community. He served on the board of the SPCA for four years. He built a new sign for the SPCA, so that people wouldn't be able to miss it while driving by on Highway 68.

Larry Arnese

He also oversaw the thrift shops for the SPCA.

"He was always doing things for other people," Mrs. Arnese said. "He was really thoughtful."

While living in Pebble Beach Arnese often made trips to Modesto and brought back fruits and vegetables for friends. A man with a green thumb, he also potted tulips and gave them away.

Arnese loved much about the life here, especially the wildlife and golfing, Mrs. Arnese said.

His family fondly recalls Arnese's great sense of humor: He loved playing pranks on people and going on larks. One time Arnese even had a fleeting chance at fame. He appeared as a customer at the bar in an episode of the television show "Cheers."

Arnese served as the youngest president of the California Seed Trade Association and as president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Woodland, CA. He was also a member of the Old Capital Club, the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, John Gardiner Tennis and the Beach and Tennis Club.

He is survived by his wife of 45 years, Joan; three daughters, Marlene Arnese, Caryl Arnese and Erin Fowke, all of the Bay Area; a brother, Franklin Arnese of Sutter Creek and two sisters, Evelyn Boitano of Sutter Creek and June Calandri of Sacramento.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Lena Horne has won many awards through the years for her singing talent. Her notable poise helped her through the early years when racial discrimination was common. Her latest recognition was especially relevant: The Society of Singers chose her for its 1997 award for Lifetime Achievement because of her one-of-a-kind vocal artistry and her commitment to humanitarian causes. Presentation of the award came one week before Ms.Horne's 80th birthday.

Dr. Robert N. Butler is generally credited with gaining recognition for geriatrics as a medical specialty. As the first chief of the National Institute on Aging he charted the course of research and education for health issues of the elderly. Since 1990 he has taught and practiced in New York while directing the International Longevity Center, a resource for intergenerational programs. Now 70, he recalled how a statement he made in 1963 led to the designations of "young-old" and "old-old". But these terms are widely misapplied today as age categories, he told an interviewer. In his view, the difference in the two groups is the degree to which they can function.

Pebble Beach naval officer wages drug war on the high seas

By RICH HENSON

THE SIGHT of the U.S. Navy warship closing in made the drug smugglers panic. Gunning the engines of the high-powered speed boat, they quickly cut across the warship's bow in an attempt to flee.

Loaded down with tons of illegal narcotics, they knew they would be unable to outrace the pursuing naval vessel. In desperation, the smugglers did the only thing they could do to escape — dump their precious cargo into the sea.

Scenes like this are being played out more frequently in the Eastern Pacific and the Caribbean Sea since the Navy began teaming up with U.S. federal agencies and other military forces in the war on drugs.

Recently, Navy Chief Warrant Officer Frank G. Van Sant, the 43-year-old son-in-law of Jackie Wilson of Pebble Beach, played a key role in one of the largest seizures of illegal drugs off the coast of South America during a successful counter-narcotics deployment aboard the guided missile destroyer USS Callaghan.

Van Sant believes that combining Navy and federal law enforcement assets gives the United States an added advantage in counter-narcotics operations.

"It's important for the Navy to help local agencies in the drug war. Local agencies do not have the assets to fight this war," said Van Sant, who is married to Wilson's daughter Lisa.

In late September, as the Callaghan neared the end of its six month deployment to the Caribbean Sea and Eastern Pacific, the ship spotted a "go-fast" drug smuggling boat off the Colombian coast. During the high-speed pursuit, the go-fast dumped overboard more than 120 60-pound bales of cocaine. While a Navy P-3 Orion patrol aircraft and a shipboard helicopter pursued the drug runners, Callaghan retrieved the jettisoned cocaine which had an estimated street value of $165 million.

Like other naval vessels participating in counter-narcotics operations, the Callaghan's seizure put a dent in the import of illegal narcotics to the United States.

"That seizure felt great. It kept some drugs off streets of the United States," Van Sant said.

Navy Chief Warrant Officer Frank G. Van Sant of Pebble Beach is a patriotic patroller of the high seas.

The 8,300-ton Callaghan is manned by a crew of 340 officers and sailors and carries a small US Coast Guard detachment during counter-narcotics operations. With a speed of more than 35 knots, the 560-foot Callaghan can quickly overtake most suspected drug runners on the high seas.

Van Sant serves as Callaghan's combat information officer. He realizes the Callaghan's advanced technology makes finding and catching suspected drug smugglers easier.

"With our advanced communication and radar, we bring a very big advantage to the war on drugs," said Van Sant, a 25-year Navy veteran.

The seizure by Callaghan was another example of the Navy's commitment to help stop the flow of illegal narcotics into the United States. Van Sant sees benefits when military and government work together to stop the smugglers.

"Our cooperation shows that it is not just the Navy fighting the war on drugs, but all the armed services. It also shows that other countries are trying to win the war on drugs as well," Van Sant said.

Big Sur Library sponsors new three-day workshop for experienced children's writers

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

WRITERS WHO have either been published or have a finished or near-finished manuscript directed at the children's market may be interested in joining a three-day workshop. The first Big Sur Children's Writing Workshop is planned for the first week in December.

Toby Rowland-Jones of the Henry Miller Library in Big Sur, is acting as project coordinator. He says that the Dec. 5 through 7 workshop will be limited to 35 participants who have received "genuine consideration by publishers" of the manuscript they plan to bring to the workshop.

Program director is Andea Brown, a former children's book editor and 20-year literary agent. Faculty members include Robert San Souci, recent Caldecott award winner and San Francisco-based author of more than 60 books; Nancy Lamb, who has written for both children's and adult markets; Judy Gitenstein, New York children's book editor, publisher and author; and Ellen Jackson, author of more than a dozen children's books.

For fees and other information, call Rowland-Jones or Linda Sonrisa at the Henry Miller Library, 667-2574 (www.henrymiller.org or hmllib@henrymiller.org).

CHS boys water polo shoots for CCS win, history tomorrow

By JERRY STEWART

WHEN THE Carmel High boys water polo team dives into the pool at Foothill College tomorrow for their Central Coast Section playoff opening round match against Menlo, the Padres will be hoping to make history.

Although CHS has had a water polo program since the late 1960s, no team has ever made it to the second round.

But head coach Conrad Kohrs and his 17-member squad, which enter the playoffs as the No. 6 seed, are not daunted by what lies before them.

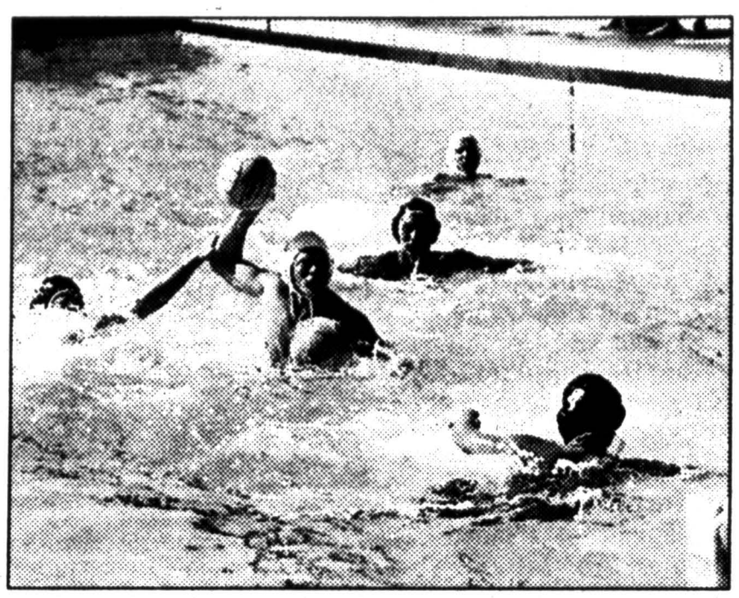
"We're in the unique position in that no one expects us to do anything," said Kohrs. "We're kind of like the Florida Marlins."

Playing in the Division II bracket, Kohrs was quick to point out that the Padres have already played five out of the other seven teams and came away with three wins, adding that his team only lost to Menlo by one goal in a confrontation last September at the Monterey Bay tournament in Hollister.

"We feel we can play with anyone in our bracket. The key is matching up our defense with their offensive strongman and keeping our offensive threats fresh," said Kohrs. "We have to make sure we mix up our offense and stay with what's working."

According to team co-captain Trevor Fogg, who scored 123 goals in the regular season, the Padres are jelling at the right time.

"If we play as well as we can, we can beat any of the teams," said Fogg. "It's up to us to meet the challenge."



Leading the Padres boys water polo team into CCS is senior Trevor Fogg, who scored 123 goals during the regular season.

Along with Fogg, the Padres will be relying on goalie Chase "The Wall" Mahoney, who had 201 saves during the year, defender Sasha Voriobov (59 steals) and Hank Stoffers (52 goals).

"Hopefully, we'll win our first game and take it all the way," said Mahoney, who scored a rare across-the-pool goal from his own goal during the last meeting with Menlo. "Maybe I'll be able to close out a win with another goal."

To give the team some extra experience, first-year-coach Kohrs brought up three sophomores including swimming speedster Craig Gonzales.

CHS girls water polo coach Ed Sigourney, whose team was snubbed by CCS despite a final 16-8 record, said that the boys' success will help pave the way for a broader water polo program at the campus.

"Their success will help both programs," said Sigourney. "I'm really proud of them."

"A lot of the guys have been playing polo since June preparing for this," said Kohrs, who is in his first year as head coach. "Their goal all along was to get to CCS and now we're here."

And if all goes as planned, history will be made.

Pirates hoping for gridiron party

By JERRY STEWART

EXCEEDING a season that has gone beyond its own expectations, the Robert Louis Stevenson football team will reward its fans by hosting a Central Coast Section playoff game Saturday at 2 p.m..

Rain or shine, the No. 4 seeded Pirates (8-2) will attempt to extend their remarkable run when they welcome No. 5 Pioneer (7-1-1) of San Jose to the Pebble Beach campus.

"Being able to play at home is very exciting," said Pirate head coach Jeff Young. "The players are thrilled."

Just last weekend Young and his squad were teetering on the CCS qualifying fence, but a convincing 28-6 win over Alisal opened the door.

And now that they're in, and at full strength with halfback sensation Bubba Beyah returning from an early season injury, the Pirates are hoping to make the occasion a private party.

But first they must get by Pioneer, a team which reflects many features that were a part of the Pirates regular season success.

"Pioneer is a lot like us. They have a good running back and they like to run," said Young, who is in his eleventh campaign as head coach. "But with us, the opposition can't just concentrate on stopping Bubba."

That's because junior halfback Paul Simonsen and quarterback Tommy Brandt also lurk in the backfield with Beyah, which provides the Pirates with a lethal combination of blazing speed (Simonsen), quickness (Brandt) and power (Beyah).

Defensively, Stevenson will be led by inside linebacker Jordan Perruci, a senior who led the team in tackles during the regular season and defensive tackle Joe Rotter, who's proven that he's a solid run-stuffer.

Backing them up is cornerback/safety Eric Hebert, who Young described as " a coach on the field."

"He's (Hebert) a student of the game and a leader on the field," said Young. "He always has his hand in the pot."

Two years ago, in their third lifetime CCS playoff game, the Pirates were also standing at 8-2 when entering the playoffs, but Young senses that this year's team is special and could earn the Pirates their first ever CCS playoff win.

Realistically, I would have been pleased if we had gone 6-4, but these kids have great character and attitude," Young said. "They've never quit, and you can't coach that. That's up to the kids."

After tomorrow, those attributes may help the Pirates move on to even bigger and more substantial celebrations.

After a few delays, RLS cross country qualifies for state meet

By JERRY STEWART

THE ROBERT Louis Stevenson girls and Carmel High boys and girls cross country teams last Saturday were scheduled to compete in the Division IV Central Coast Section playoff at Crystal Springs park in the Bay Area, but Mother Nature intervened and canceled the race due to a soggy field.

Since they were already there, Stevenson coach Cleve Thayer let his squad work out on the course in preparation for Tuesday's rescheduled run, stating that "runners like it overcast and cold. They never get hot."

Then at Tuesday's official run, the preparations paid off, and the Lady Pirates were anything but cold.

When the dust and clouds cleared, the Pirates ended up with a second-place finish, qualifying the team for a trip to the state finals at Woodward Park In Fresno next Saturday.

But even when the race was over, the Pirates still had to wait an excruciating few moments to find out their fate.

"We were first told that we had won fourth-place," said Thayer. "They had missed one of our runners so we were walking on pins and needles for a while. But I knew we would be bumped up. The girls really went from a state of depression to elation."

Again, the Pirates were led by Stephanie Stuart, who finished in second (19:40) and qualified for the state meet as an individual.

Joining Stuart in Fresno will be teammates Mizuri Fujii, Jessica Morris, Kristin Thomas, Zena Herman, Samantha Lieberman and Dania Akkad, who was the "missing " runner from Tuesday's race.

"For some of the girls it will be their third trip to the state meet," Thayer said.

Tyson Curtis, who was the lone male runner representing Stevenson, finished 24th overall.

Meanwhile, although Carmel finished 4th in the boys standings and 7th in the girls standings, two Padres will also be packing their bags and shoes for a trip to Fresno.

Girls runner Molly Allen, who finished sixth overall (20:43) and boys runner Chip Powers, who finished 8th (16:44), will represent the Padres at the state meet.

Holiday season a time for giving — to your community

Remember when you were a child and your mother tried to teach you that giving was as m ch fun as getting? It's amazing how few adults seem to have really taken that lesson to heart.

We'd like to remind you of your mother's wisdom and direct your attention to just a few of the many local charities that need help — in the form of time or money — at this time of year.

For example, the Carmel Convalescent Hospital needs volunteers willing to bring a little happiness to the lives of its residents — some of whom have no family to visit them at the holidays. Donated gifts would be welcome as well. Anyone interested should call 624-3285 and offer just a bit of themselves for the benefit of their fellow Carmelites.

The Salvation Army is a perennial leader in taking care of the less fortunate, and we're blessed right here in the Monterey Peninsula with a very vigorous and committed Salvation Army corps. They need volunteers to ring bells and man the donation stations at various spots around Carmel and surrounding communities. Please call 899-4911 if you can help.

The Salvation Army also conducts a food drive during the holidays, and donations are accepted here in Carmel at the Fire Station on 6th near Dolores, and at The Pine Cone offices on 4th between Mission and San Carlos.

A really fun event to benefit the Carmel Youth Center and the Carmel Music Society takes place on December 6 at The Crossroads Shopping Center. Special Christmas Trees and other holiday goodies donated by local groups will be auctioned off for the benefit of these two groups.

Many other local charities have unique holiday programs and need extra help at this time of year. We'll be printing information about more of them in the weeks ahead.

But perhaps you think you'll be too busy shopping, preparing meals, and taking care of your family to spend any time volunteering this year.

Well even if you are too busy for charity, there's another thing you can do to help out your community while taking care of yourself — by doing your holiday shopping at local businesses. This year your mailbox will again be stuffed with unbelievable numbers of catalogs from companies trying to tempt you to send your holiday dollars to them. Instead, send those catalogs straight to the recycling bin and support the livelihoods of your friends and neighbors by walking into a local shop and buying something!

"Thank you Margaret"

Dear Editor:

I wish to publicly thank Margaret Frank for her generous gift of my motorized scooter, called the Rascal. How amazing life in Carmel is to think a stranger who overheard me admiring such a vehicle offered to give me such an incredible gift. My life has changed so much; I now can go anywhere and feel such independence.

Each new day is now full of adventures, as well as new found friends.

Thank you Margaret.

El Niño's climate changes

Dear Editor:

We are seeing locally keen interest in El Niño and its counterpart, La Niña, which are certain to impact our weather and personal comfort this winter and some years to come. We're still in a major drought, since Feb., and intermittent rain storms may not interrupt this generally dry climate the next 14 months.

It is likely the too wet / too dry El Niño pattern of 1975-77 will be a probable prototype where our area is the drought phase of El Niño. Other areas of California may feel most of the too wet storm cycle.

As we proceed midst all the public exposure to discovering the El Niño environmental events, we may realize the consequences of too little rain and too much heat over the next several years. Our institutions, water and water related utilities, must be deeply involved in contingency damage control planning and insuring us and neighborhood watersheds via integrat-

Many lessons for Measure B, but weak cause was No. 1 problem

By BURKERT CREE

COMMENTARY

MANY LESSONS can be drawn from past elections, and the failure of Measure B, the ambulance tax, is no exception.

For starters, there was no organized opposition to the Measure. At the very last minute of the very last day (the same day on which the deadline was published), we rushed something into the hands of the election officer, so that the guide to the voters would not appear all one-sided, and the measure seem unopposed.

We were lucky to make that deadline, for the proposers had stayed quiet about it. We then wrote a couple of letters to the Pine Cone. We chose not to take to the debate forum, thinking that the matter could best be settled in the ballot booth. Where, to our delight, it was.

Our opposition had all the energy and fire power that one would want for such a fight. They had themselves well-organized and funded, and they mailed, and handed out, and telephoned, and begged and pleaded, and all the rest of it. They had everything; everything, that is, except a good cause!

Why? We had asked, cannot a deficit of $100,000 be put into a budget of more than $9 million? That would be 1 percent of current budget. That was never answered, at last not to the satisfaction of a sufficient number of the voters.

Our opponents were all worthy and dedicated citizens, but, with all respect due them, we were never convinced that they letter from him — protesting censorship — and two others accompanying it, were never published by the new owners.

Union rep Jackson called for "fair contracts for current employees" and demanded that "the union busting be stopped." He described that the actions of K-R as "hostile and wrong" and called for the audience to pledge to cancel their Herald subscriptions.

Former Employee Ken Schultz said Herald employees who were fired and not rehired had three things in common: they had all worked there at least 17 years, they were all over 40 years of age, they were all in top-paying positions. He said that it was a loss to the staff of K-R that they had lost journalists who could help the younger generation of reporters; "No one that is there now," he said, "could possibly know what I know about the area."

Rod Holmgren decried what he said is a shift in focus "from the news to the bottom line." And, speaking about censorship, Holmgren commented that "freedom of the press is [only] guaranteed to anyone who owns one."

Throughout the meeting, not one single person — in a packed auditorium — got up to speak in K-R's defense.

Also, no one from Herald management spoke at the meeting. But new Herald publisher Pat Keil has repeatedly stated that Knight-Ridder's intention is to run a high-quality responsible newspaper with a strong component of community service and excellent employee relations.

CREE

had done their homework on this, nor had city council, nor city staff.

But the silliness of the town rages on and on. For example, unreported in The Pine Cone was the fact that the council saw fit to award the city manager with a pay raise of over 13 percent, plus all that travels with that, on the very night that their measure is going down to defeat.

In like manner, they fight to try to hire a special manager for the Ambulance operation, at $50 to $60,000 a year, when it is not clear that such a position is needed or desirable, let alone affordable.

The lesson I learned is simply this. If more citizens became involved in watching our elected officials and the hired hands under them, the city would be better off.

You believe that we have the finest, best, fastest EMS that money can buy. Fine. But where did you get that idea? From a careful evaluation of the service, or from the hype connected with propping it up? Are you aware that the cost to the user for a trip to the hospital up the hill is more than $600? Two to three miles, and $600! And they aren't able to make expenses even at that.

Perhaps an outside consultant could help. I cannot see how such could hurt.

EMS, first responder aid is serious business, and it ought to be taken more seriously here in our town. It is time to get the best. It is time to get a real committee, and have a real study of the local operation, and our needs. We cannot afford the continued marshmallow approach to such serious business.

READY, GET SET, SHOP!

Handmade items abound at Carmel's gift fairs

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

ALTHOUGH THE starter's gun for Christmas shopping traditionally isn't fired until the day after Thanksgiving, Carmel gets a head start at 10 a.m. tomorrow in the three San Carlos Street parking lots at Sunset Center, San Carlos between Ninth and Tenth.

Michael Miller adds an arm to a chair made of fallen redwood limbs, using no screws or nails. His work will be shown at the Potters & Friends Faire at All Saints' Church.

More than 300 cottage industry homecrafters will spread their wares on tables and in booths throughout the three-level area Saturday as holiday shoppers gather for the always well-attended annual bazaar.

The 27th annual Homecrafters Marketplace is a one-day affair, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and is sponsored by the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Coordinator Lannette Berge says in case of rain, the marketplace will be bumped to Sunday. If it rains on Sunday, the bazaar will be called off until next year. Berge says this would be an unprecedented occurrence.

Handmade gift and home items will be for sale, from holiday topiaries and natural pine cone wreaths to wooden rockers, sculpture, natural stone and marble coasters and trivets, wooden reindeer, rag rugs and hand knit booties, cone ornaments and glass-encased pressed flower window-hangings, wooden toys, jewelry, ceramics, handmade calligraphy cards and quotations, shell boxes, hand turned wooden bowls and boxes, copper wind chimes and much more.

Berge advises shoppers to come early, as items prepared by homecrafters are not in unlimited quantities. Some of the more popular merchandise is sold out by noon.

A 4-by-4 inch patchwork flower sampler is one example of Cheri McCarty's pressed flower gifts that she crafts from home-grown flowers and sells annually at Homecrafters.

Two sales at All Saints'

Two separate sales events will take place simultaneously at All Saints' Episcopal Church tomorrow at Ninth Avenue and Dolores: The Potters & Friends Faire will be held from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the upper forecourt, while the parish Fine Art and Craft sale will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the church social halls and patio on the lower level

SANDY CLAWS

BARON KINNEAR, despite his size, has no fear of large waves or pounding surf. He swims at Carmel Beach daily and plays in the sand, burying optic yellow tennis balls in the deep holes he digs, never to retrieve them again.

When 2-year-old Baron tears along the beach at top speed, his curly pug tail straightens out, but curls again when he come to a standstill. When he comes to a standstill, he sticks out his pink tongue. Although having a monochromatic coat of black, Baron is quite a colorful guy.

Mom Cynthia says he loves to eat, although he's watching his weight just now — not wanting to be a pudgy pug — enjoys a good tug-o'-war with a rope, and is particularly fond of visiting Larry and Lucy, neighborhood pug pals. His half-brother Sharky toddles over from Monterey for a beach visit now and then, and Baron returns the courtesy by taking Lake El Estero walks with Sharky. This more or less rounds out Baron's social calendar.

We are told that pugs were bred as lap dogs for Chinese royalty, voluptuaries who required the pug's radiated warmth on long winter trips. Now that that sort of sybaritic need has fallen by the political and historic wayside, Baron is free to play and dig, swim and run as he sees fit.

His mom says he is very obedient and fun to be around, but the bills for his tennis balls — even as the balls themselves — are out of sight.

Village Pub going quackers over Huey, Dewey, Louie

EVER HEAR of a "duck war?"

Well, there's one raging at the Village Pub on San Carlos south of Ocean, and it seems that all who go in there are choosing sides!

BEFORE we go further, some background:

When the pub opened several months ago, owners Don and Judy Bowen poured their hearts and souls into establishing a cozy decor for the place, and Judy's proudest contributions were carved figures of three ducks in flight she found in an antique shop up in the Gold Country.

THEY'RE mounted on the wall near the bar, and while they may be Judy's favorites, they're not everybody's!

You know how it goes. After about the third drink, bibbers at the bar become CRITICS — critics of their wives, their bosses, the color of sunsets, the bartender's haircut, etc.

"AND by the way," went the bar conversation one evening, "who in the name of Ned put those silly ducks on the wall?"

That's how it started.

NEXT thing you know, they're stuffing the pub's Suggestion Box with notes like "How long do we have to look at those stupid ducks?" And "Damn the ducks, full torpedoes ahead!"

This, however, triggered counterattacks from the surprisingly large numbers of CPAs who are regulars there — we mean, of course, members of the Canvasbacks Protective Association.

THAT group began filling the Suggestion Box with missives like, "Long live the ducks!" And "If the ducks go, I go!"

Pin feathers are being ruffled, for sure, but Judy is trying to defuse the opposition by naming the ducks, Huey, Dewey and Louie! (After all, who could possibly be against Huey, Dewey and Louie?)

IT may not work, though, because Don is exacerbating the problem by threatening to add duck soup to the restaurant's menu! (He's a troublemaker.)

No solution to this whole fracas is in sight but peacemakers are hoping it will be resolved soon, for patrons are beginning to take the March Hare off-

'Kyoto Dreams,' concert of Japanese chamber music, performed Sunday

"KYOTO DREAMS" is the theme of a 7 p.m. Sunday concert offered in the gallery of the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts.

Philip Flavin, Robin Hartshorne and Fumiko Kodama will perform in concert on the Shakuhachi and Koto Shamisen at Cherry Center. Flavin, a Ph.D. candidate at Berkeley, has recently returned from Japan while on a Fulbright scholarship. He has attended the Seiha Conservatory of Japanese Music in Tokyo and in 1985 received a master teaching degree. Flavin has also studied the koto with virtuoso Shinichi Huize.

Robin Hartshorne is a professor of mathematics at Berkeley and Fumiko Kodama plays chamber music professionally in Japan.

Tickets are $12. The Cherry Center is located at the northwest corner of Fourth and Guadalupe in Carmel. For reservations or information, call 624-7491.

'Coupla White Chicks' reveal turmoil beneath the laughter

By PATRICK WHITEHURST

LAST SUNDAY night, it was pouring rain. It was the kind of evening that tempts one to curl up with a book and settle down in front of the fire. But, despite the rain, there was a full house and the happy murmur of an audience anticipating good theater filled the air. And we were not disappointed.

Though "A Coupla White Chicks Sitting Around Talking" is comedy, there is a palpable undercurrent of forlorn despair that plagues its two characters. Little by little as the story unfolds it subtly reveals their inner turmoil.

John Ford Noonan's off-Broadway hit stars Suzie Commins as Maude Mix and Jill Jackson as Hanna Mae in this MagiCircle Theatre presentation at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts.

Director Elsa Con has obviously drawn on her expertise as a practicing psychologist and has blended that knowledge with her stage experience to highlight and foreshadow the two character's roles. It is a two-woman show and both shine.

Inner conflict

Maude's inner conflict is evident in the opening scene as the Mrs. Uptight Westchester County Housewife listening to classical music (the person she tries to be) switches to a Rock 'n' Roll station and begins bopping around while she bakes charity cookies.

Of course this subtlety was lost on me — and I think on the rest of the audience — until well into the second act, and this is further evidence of fine acting and directing.

Jill Jackson plays Hanna Mae and Suzie Commins is Maude Mix in the Magic Circle Theatre production at Cherry Hall.

Hanna Mae is Maude's new next door neighbor. Her brash and flamboyant down-home Texas invasion of Maude's ordered life is wonderful comedy, especially so as Maude tries unsuccessfully to dissuade Hanna's steamroller tactics to be neighborly.

Hanna introduces herself: "I'll just pour myself a cup of your coffee. I brought my own cup."

Two characters who are as real to the performance as though they were onstage are the wayward and straying husbands of both Maude and Hanna Mae. If we cannot see these characters, we can certainly feel their presence. It is these errant husbands who eventually bind the two in their otherwise unlikely friendship.

That Suzie Commins and Jill Jackson enjoyed their roles is evident. Their acting skill and good comedic timing develop the characters so well that Maude's and Hanna Mae's friendship, trust and their improbable sisterhood during the final act is believable.

Elsa Con, the founder of Magic Circle Theatre, and her entire production staff are to be congratulated on their presentation and their clever and imaginative use of the intimate stage space.

Jean-Louis Steuerman: coming on like a sort of high priest of the piano

By LYN BRONSON

SARTORIAL FASHION in concert dress has been changing in recent years. After many decades of full dress tails for men and long dresses for women, the winds of change have been blowing steadily. A few years ago a local concert society presented one of today's rising young violinists who appeared on stage in a tight, slinky, black pants suit with 10-inch spike heels (or at least they seemed that high), and although she looked like a hooker, she played like an angel.

When Jean-Louis Steuerman strode to center stage to play with the Monterey County Symphony this week he was dressed in Armani black from head to toe. Everything, including his suit, high-collar shirt, socks and shoes, was black. With his shock of prematurely white hair and angelic expression, he didn't look like a member of the mob, and he didn't have a mask and cape, so he didn't resemble Zorro. You might say he looked like a benevolent priest, a sort of high priest of the piano.

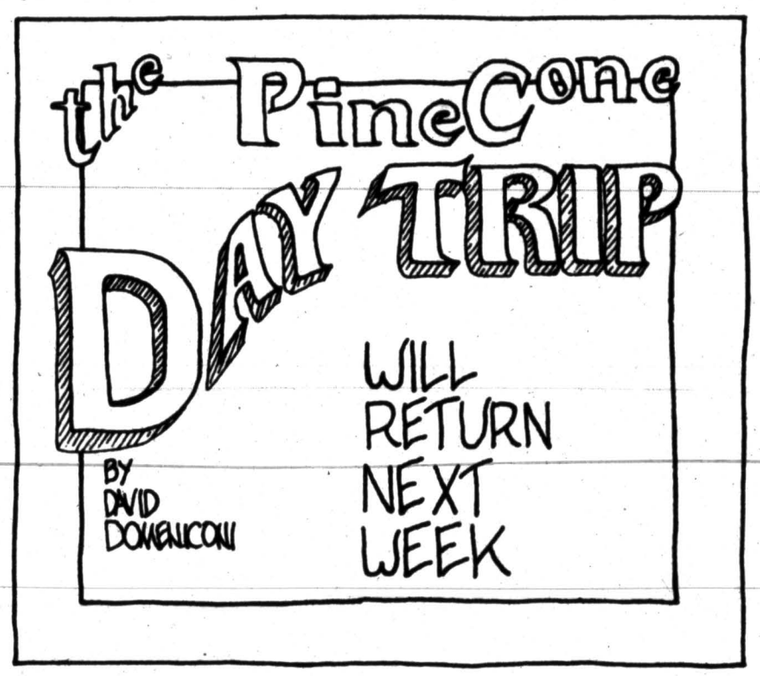
We don't often hear the Mendelssohn G Minor Piano Concerto in live concert. Many pianists choose to play flashier, meatier concertos and this has contributed to a neglect of both of Mendelssohn's piano concertos. Thus, we have to be grateful for Mr. Steuerman's commitment to this frequently overlooked corner of the pianist's repertoire. Mendelssohn's piano concertos are masterpieces of elegant refinement, much in the style of Mozart, Hummel and Kalkbrenner. This means that we most often hear them performed with reduced orchestras. Not so, in this instance, however, for it was definitely a full orchestra on stage at Sunset Theater under the direction of Clark Suttle.

Because of the size of the orchestra and how loudly the Monterey County Symphony played its accompaniment, Mr. Steuerman also had to play very loudly. Thus, at times we were hearing Mendelssohn in the style of Tchaikovsky, with crashing octaves and over pedaled passages in an attempt to match the heavy sonority of the orchestra. However, Mr. Steuerman, patrician artist that he is, managed to achieve a very successful performance. Many times when the orchestration was tacit or lightly scored, he reduced his dynamics and showed us what a lovely, elegant pianist he is. In the beautiful slow movement we heard his luscious tone and superbly shaped phrasing. In the finale, his fingers raced along in a mad dash to the coda, where the tempo was so fast it took your breath away. The yahoos in the crowd kicked up their usual "yippy-ay-a's" and the audience cheered long and loudly.

Fine principal players

The concert opened with Ginastera's Variaciones concertantes, a theme and 11 variations featuring prominent solo passages for the principal instruments of the orchestra, somewhat similar to Benjamin Britten's "The Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra." I overheard a patron at intermission who quipped, "the Ginastera work was 'The Old Person's Guide to the Orchestra'." It was a wonderful opportunity to hear many of the fine principal players in the orchestra who received recognition from Mr. Suttle and the audience at its end.

The other work on the program was the Ralph Vaughan Williams Symphony No. 2 ("A London Symphony") that received a handsome performance. The lovely Lento slow movement was gorgeous. Both the second and the fourth movements had the most beautiful soft endings, and it is a tribute to Mr. Suttle that this fantastic control of dynamics was achieved, for it is often the sign of a very good orchestra when they can achieve superb pianissimos that are under control.



THEATER CALENDAR

BRILLIANT TRACES

Jody Gilmore and Dania Ketcham portray "two lonely people baring their souls" in this drama by Cindy Lou Johnson.

GREETINGS

Tom Dudzick wrote this play that features a miracle when Andy Gorski brings his Jewish atheist fiance home on Christmas Eve to meet his Catholic parents and severely retarded younger brother. Following a family blow-up, the young boy speaks in a way he never could before.

"Greetings," directed by Diann Matheson, continues in the SRO Theatre at Monterey Peninsula College, 980 Fremont St., Monterey. Curtain is at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays through Nov. 30. (There will be no show on Thanksgiving).

Tickets are $7 general admission and $5 for students and senior citizens.

THE IMOGENE (OR THE WITCH'S SECRET)

The Troupers of the Gold Coast stage this, their 533rd production since June of 1937. "Imogene" tells of James Reed, driven by greed and power, who ruins the lives of all who knew him. Olio acts follow.

"Imogene" plays Fridays and Saturdays through November. Curtain time is 8 p.m. at California's First Theatre, Scott and Pacific, in Monterey. Tickets are $9 for adults, $7 for seniors and teens, and $5 for age 12 and under. 375-4916.

MUSIC

Concerts feature breakthrough talent and veteran artists

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

HAUNTED BY Waters, a highlight of the 1997 Monterey World Music Festival, returns this Saturday to the Monterey Peninsula performing at Carleton Hall in downtown Monterey. Promoter Barbara Murphy has been booking concerts more frequently at Carleton Hall, located in the Church of Religious Science on Franklin Street, "to take advantage of the room's excellent acoustics." Also, seating in the rear has been removed, allowing for more spontaneous dancing.

Haunted by Waters

A San Francisco Bay area quintet, HBW is a power-ethno ensemble that plays "atmospheric progressive" world music. Playing a vast assortment of musical instruments, the music of HBW is an exotic mixture of primitive rhythms and modern sounds that incorporates a myriad of musical styles including Celtic, African and Middle Eastern influences. Electric violins, synthesizers, flutes, guitars, didgeridoo, tamblas and other percussion instruments all mesh to create an ethereal backdrop for the sensual and moving vocals of Irish-born lead vocalist Cait McWhir.

The group's live performance at this year's Monterey World Music Festival was both enchanting and captivating. Their 1996 CD release, Like The Dust, is a haunting melodic mix of original songs that comes close to capturing the band's essence. Check them out live this Saturday. Advance tickets are $10 and are available at Bookmark in Pacific Grove or call Portofino Presents at 373-7379. Music starts at 8 p.m.

A Tribute to Dottie

The Media Room in Pacific Grove is a new multi-media venue with an ultramodern look located in the Grove Homescapes building at 472 Lighthouse Ave. Wired for sound and designed with recording live performances in mind, The Media Room has grandiose plans. Upcoming events include an eight-part lecture series entitled "What is Jazz," exploring different forms of the genre. More details to follow.

Next Friday, Nov. 28, The Media Room hosts a "Tribute to a Pioneer in Jazz: Dottie Dodgion." Better known locally as the excellent drummer that she is, Dottie will on Friday leave the drumming chores to Dave Morwood and will sing jazz standards backed by a group comprised of stellar San Francisco guitarist Bruce Foreman, Morwood and bassist Al Obidinski.

Dottie Dodgion, who now calls Pacific Grove home, actually began her jazz career in the '50s singing with legendary jazz bassist Charles Mingus. As a singer with her father's group on the road, Dottie had plenty opportunity to fill in as a drummer and a new career was in the making. Over the years her reputation grew and she has performed with many of the best including Benny Goodman, Marion McPartland, Zoot Sims and Tony Bennett, among others. In 1994 she released her first solo CD, Dottie Dodgion Sings, on Arbor Records which received considerable critical praise. Said jazz critic John off Lincoln.

Sales in both venues will be open for business, rain or shine.

The Potters & Friends Faire, which is in its fourth year, has changed its previous locale from the Carmel Woman's Club to All Saints.

Bunny Pfeiffer, a potter who is coordinating the faire, is a longtime member of the Carmel Adult School ceramic class at Sunset Center sponsoring the event. Pfeiffer says the "friends" are local artisans who have been invited to present their wares for sale along with the potters.

These include a furniture maker and sculptor from Big Sur; a photographer who specializes in black and white prints; a Victorian as well as an East Indian jeweler; a tailor; a soap maker; ironworkers; a furniture painter; Monterey County Fair prize winning ceramicists; and a baby clothes seamstress. Holiday topiaries and hostess gifts will also be for sale, and a face painter will be on hand to decorate children and adults' faces.

Proceeds from the sale of pottery class items and a share of the booth fees benefit the class and will be used for equipment and materials.

Parish Fine Art and Craft sale

The third annual All Saints' Parish Fine Art and Craft sale will feature handmade items by 40 local artisans and crafters and will be held in the church halls on the lower level, which is also accessible from the Lincoln Street side of the church.

Also planned by parishioners is a sit-down luncheon and an English tea as well as a bake sale. Proceeds from these and exhibitor space rentals will be used for All Saints' local outreach programs.

Harvest Fair Today

Carmel Valley's Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula is holding its Harvest Fair beginning today at 9 a.m. through 3 p.m., and will be repeated again tomorrow during the same hours.

As well as handcrafted items, Christmas decorations described as "dazzling" will be on sale, as will baked goods, jellies, jams and nuts. For on-the-spot consumption, coffee and hot German donuts will be for sale.

Proceeds from the Harvest Fair will benefit local charities.

The Community Church is located on Carmel Valley Road one mile east of Highway 1.

MAKE DAY ONE OF THANKSGIVING FOR FEATHERED FRIENDS, ALSO

The Bohemian Gourmet

By Jennifer Viegas

I LOVE to see a stuffed bird at this time of year, and not just Thanksgiving dinner's traditional main course. Instead I refer more to the amazing variety of birds that live in this region. Big Sur and surrounding areas are home to the greatest number of bird species found in all of California. This fact itself deserves a heartfelt giving of thanks.

There are several ways to enjoy our blessing of feathered friends. The first simply is to go bird watching. You might observe red-tailed hawks, Stellar's jays, cormorants, snowy plovers, any number of gulls, hummingbirds, California quail, belted kingfishers and common murrets. Even rare, endangered birds, such as golden eagles and brown pelicans, may be spotted.

For best viewing, check out some of the bird watchers' hot spots. The small rock islands near Pebble Beach, known as Bird and Seal Rock, are good for lazy days due to the easily accessible telescopes. Look there for the black-footed albatross, a stately bird rarely seen elsewhere, with a wingspan of seven feet.

A short trip north to National Estuarine Research Reserve off Highway 1 at Moss Landing, is well worth the effort. Follow the reserve's Five-Fingers loop trail for about one mile. It will lead you to Parson's Slough Overlook, three words that send chills down the backs of bird-watchers across the country. This is where the "Big Sit" occurred, on Oct. 31, 1982. That day a record was established for the most bird species, 116, ever to be observed in all of North America during a 24-hour period. With a good set of binoculars in tow, see how many you can identify.

Bird-watching here does not have to involve much travel. Homeowners with backyards, large and small, may also possess excellent bird viewing ground. To attract such visitors, consider installing birdbaths, feeders and birdhouses. Even if you already have these items, there are some wonderful new products available locally now.

To feed your guests, choose winter fruit and seed bearing plants for your garden. Supplement natural sources in ground feeders, seed dispensers and suet hangers. Depending on the species, birds will eat cracked corn, millet, sunflower seeds, thistle, wheat germ, dried fruits, crumbs from baked goods and even crushed up dog biscuits.

The two ingredients that always seem to elicit tweets for seconds in my yard are black sunflower seeds and beef suet. Black sunflower seeds are available at pet and feed shops, and in bulk through mail-order distributors. I love to watch the birds eat them. Like kids chomping on sunflower seeds at a baseball game, the birds just chew and spit and shoot the breeze all day. Seed shells, by the way, can be used as mulch or may be added to your compost bin.

Beef suet requires a bit more preparation. First, save unseasoned raw beef fat scraps in an airtight tub. Store in the refrigerator. When ready to use, grind up or finely chop the fat (suet). Heat in a double boiler until melted. Allow to cool slightly then reheat. At this point, other ingredients, such as seeds or nuts may be added. Pour into a square tin or mold. Cover and refrigerate until firm. The block then may be placed in a wire basket or mesh bag for hanging.

The following two recipes come from a delightful little book called, "My Recipes are for the Birds," by Irene Cosgrove, Doubleday, 1975. I received mine a few years back as a Christmas present. It has come in handy, since I like to host two Thanksgiving celebrations: one for myself and guests, and another outdoor meal with dishes just for the birds. Everyone leaves stuffed.

Bird Feeder Granola

1/2 cup honey
1/2 cup corn oil
1 cup each:
peanut hearts
white millet (both available at pet and feed shops and through mail order) wheat germ
crushed dog biscuits (to crush, place biscuits in a plastic zip lock bag between sheets of newspaper and bang away with a meat pounder or rubber mallet) raisins
sunflower seeds

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

In a small pan over medium-high heat, warm honey and corn oil until honey dissolves. Meanwhile, place rest of the ingredients in a large mixing bowl. Pour honey/oil mixture over dry ingredients. Mix well. Press into a baking pan. Bake for 10 minutes Cool slightly then refrigerate. Break into pieces and add to feeder.

Mockingbird Muffins

1 cup cornmeal
1 cup flour
1 cup bread crumbs
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
3/4 cup currants
1/4 teaspoon sand (birds use it as a digestive aid)
1/2 cup bacon drippings, melted
1 cup warm water

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Combine cornmeal, flour, bread crumbs and soda in a medium sized bowl. Add currants and sand. Pour in bacon drippings and water. Mix well. Spoon in muffin tins. Bake for 15 minutes Serve on feeder tray or impale on branches.

Bon Appetweet.

Weber Drummond
Pianist and composer Weber Drummond was born in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and studied both classical music and jazz. He has performed alongside Gilberto Gil, Herbie Hancock, Wayne Shorter, Jess Knubis, Kenny Stahl and many others. His writings blend traditional Brazilian rhythms with modern jazz harmonies. His music is highly original, exploring new musical idioms in the same vein as Chick Corea and Herbie Hancock.
Sat. Dec. 6

Babatunde
The exceptional percussionist Babatunde stunned a Jazz Store audience in March with his incredible musicianship and swinging technique. With an incredibly delicate touch so every stroke can be heard; Babatunde's expertise includes not only straight-ahead jazz, but African, Cuban, and Brazilian styles as well for an incredibly rich mixture of rhythms. He can be heard on his Diaspora Records release, Level of Intent, which includes Jón Faddis, Kenny Barron, and Hilton Ruiz, among others.
Sat. Dec. 13

Jessica Williams
Jazz Store favorite Jessica Williams will perform a solo concert to start off the holiday season. Williams' mastery of all styles of jazz piano, from James P. Johnson through Art Tatum and Monk, is impressive, and why Dave Brubeck says she is the best improvising pianist playing today. She has an upcoming new release on the Blackhawk label entitled Joyful Sorrow, a celebration of Bill Evans recorded live at the Jazz Store September 15, 1996.

The Great Wine Escape a blast!

Just what the doctor ordered, a three-day escape from stress and strain with everything from music, great food and of course, one of our area's greatest prides on parade, our wines! Starting with a jazz concert at the Taste of Monterey on Cannery Row to superb Wine Dinners at our very best restaurants and then onto the roads in our own chariots or on buses with fellow celebrants merry en route, thinking about what was to come, and then VERY merry on return after winery tours and much, much tasting! Congrats to the organizers, participants and please do it again next year.

'Just Folks Tables' for Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving for me is the most sentimental of all of the holidays, the time when family and friends are most cherished and also the time when those folks who are alone feel most abandoned. Most of this writing will be first-person, and for most

THE GREAT WINE ESCAPE A HUGE SUCCESS!

Congratulations to the Monterey County Vintners & Growers Association on an outstanding event. The 1st Annual Great Wine Escape sold over 1000 tickets, sold out the wine makers dinners, and generated over 200 room nights throughout Monterey County.. Portions of the proceeds will benefit Kinship Center foster care and adoption, who, by the way, had over 50 volunteers helping out at the wineries. An excellent response was received from those who attended, so mark your calendars for November 13, 14, 15, 1998.

journalists that's a no-no, but there's no other way to tell this tale and I'll plead columnists' license.

Clearly my saddest Thanksgiving was many years ago when I had landed a new job and moved to a strange city. Career woman or no, I was pretty dumb, very shy and intimidated by the metropolis. So, I made a reservation at a dignified hotel — why dignified? Well, young women alone did-not bop out to the nearest bar to make friends, and I didn't want to have masses of celebrating, multi generations of families around me. I was just too tender and vulnerable, and I'd been told that the chosen dining room didn't cater to families, but rather to older folk and smaller groups.

The whole experience was like a film noir sequence. The music was so low you could hear the elderly gentleman across the way softly slurping his soup. A few tables down, a blue-haired lady impeccably dressed studied her menu as if she were memorizing lines for a play. Somber wait staff oozed around doing their thing and nary a smile was seen or a snatch of conversation or laughter heard. My goodness, I thought if someone would only erupt with a huge sneeze, and the devil in me wanted to stand up and shout... "Everybody up — and let's dance!" But of course I didn't! What would PEOPLE say!?

Well, this person had a great deal to say in successive years. When the kids were home and Bert was teaching at Boston College, there were always a few foreign students who had nowhere to go for the holiday, so we always had a table of happy young folk. When the nest emptied, we'd serve dinner to others at the local Salvation Army headquarter's dining hall, and that was satisfying.

But the best solution took awhile and I'm hoping that it takes off here too. Several years ago in Boston when I was doing talk radio daily, about a month before the holiday I began to exhort the restaurant community to start a "Just Folks" table for people alone. The results were amazing!

The restaurateurs responded as only the food community can. More than 20 well-known eateries in the hub, at all levels of casualness or elegance, had an open table for eight where "folks who had no folks" could join together in food, fun and fellowship. The only rules were, you had to reserve in advance, be alone, of course pick up your own tab and be willing to be outgoing and friendly. What a flood of post holiday mail came in and what good public relations for the restaurants! Most of them tossed in a complimentary bottle of wine and at one four-star establishment which only drew one person for the "Just Folks" table, the owner sat down and ate with the guest, keeping up a running patter of his fascinating career all over the world!

Restaurateurs, let me know if you're able to do this and

Durney Vineyards "Dance on Your Palate"

Durney Vineyards pioneered the Carmel Valley, California viticultural area. The organic, essentially dry-farmed vineyards produce Estate Bottled premium Cabernet Sauvignon, Chardonnay, Pinot Noir, Riesling and Chenin Blanc.

Durney Vineyards has been producing luscious, fruit-laden grapes since 1968. The vineyards are located at 1,500 feet above sea level and planted on 120 acres in the Cachagua region of the Carmel Valley. These grapes are grown in ideal conditions without the use of pesticides. They have officially been certified as organically grown. The modern, efficient winery produces award-winning wines of world-class recognition, aged in French oak barrels.

Durney Vineyards has established an attractive retail sales tasting room in Carmel Valley Village at 13746 Center Street, which is open daily from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. and Saturdays from 11:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., which offers not only their premium wines but a selection of unusual wine gift accesories as well. Tel: (408) 659-6220.

The wines have been awarded numerous Gold and Silver Medals, as well as extraordinary praise from the wine press throughout the world. They are truly magical wines that "Dance on Your Palate."

ea for restaurant dining

I'll list you in my column and mention you on my Magic 63 capsules. There are a good many solo folk in our beautiful area, let's make the day one for celebration not hibernation!

If you're fortunate enough to have family and friends on your home "folks" list, here are two recipes which you may enjoy. The Sweet Potato Casserole is easy and always disappears — no leftovers.

Lotte's Sweet Potato Casserole

Serves 8

3 pounds sweet potatoes or yams (or two, 29-oz. cans)
3 eggs, separated
2 tablespoons butter melted
1 teaspoon salt
2-4 tablespoons maple syrup (or brown sugar)
1 tablespoon baking powder
2/3 cup orange juice
1/2 cup pecans, coarsely chopped
jigger of brandy
1/4 cup whole pecans (for garnish)

Boil, peel and mash potatoes or if using canned yams, heat and mash. Blend in the well-beaten egg yolks, butter, salt, maple syrup (or sugar), baking powder, orange juice, chopped nuts and brandy. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Place in buttered casserole and bake 30 to 45 minutes at 350 degrees.

Parsnip Pecan Cake

Remember my raving about parsnips? Well here's a recipe a reader shared with me. Thanks, Miriam. She also notes that this cake is particularly good served warm with applesauce.

Makes a 10-inch tube cake

1 1/4 cups sugar
1 1/4 cups salad oil

LOTTE...

2 cups all purpose flour
1 tablespoon each baking powder and baking soda
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1/4 teaspoons salt
4 eggs
3 cups grated raw parsnips
1 1/2 cups finely chopped pecans

Thoroughly combine sugar and oil. Sift together dry ingredients. Add to oil and sugar mixture, alternating with the eggs, beating well after each addition. Mix in parsnips, then pecans. Pour into a buttered 10-inch tube pan. Bake in a preheated (325 degrees) for one hour and 10 minutes. Cool in the pan for 10 minutes before removing.

Have a bountiful, delicious and friendly Thanksgiving!

ramp with such loopy statements as:

• "The duck is, too, our national bird. Haven't you ever heard of the Bald Duck?"

• "Bartender, I'm buying a round for the house — just put it on my bill!" And he points to his lips and begins to quack.

AN older man at the bar confided that the situation is becoming so volatile that police may have to be called in to restore order.

He seemed like a completely responsible, rational gentleman until he added in a low, serious voice:

"YES, I think this thing has gone so far now that it's become a case for Duck Tracy!"

(I'm never going in there again.)

TODAY'S QUOTE . . . P.J. O'Rourke, conservative political columnist, quoted in Forbes magazine on the Ronald Reagan presidency:

"We nostalgically recall the days when sleeping with the President meant attending a Cabinet meeting."

THESE FOOLISH THINGS . . . You gotta love the immovable mindset of members of the Monterey Elks Lodge!

A little over a month ago, they rejected the only four membership applications they had received from WOMEN all year! All 10 MALES who applied this year, however, sailed right through.

OF the Monterey Lodge's 486 paid-up members, only ONE is a woman — Kitty Tufford — who was admitted last year. (Why is unclear.)

Anyway, disturbed by the Monterey Lodge's apparent discrimination against women, the national Elks headquarters in Chicago asked them to ballot again on the rejected four females.

SO last week, Fred Flintstone, Barney Rubble and the rest put down their clubs, hitched up their loincloths and marched right in there and — did it to them again!

They blackballed all four women all over again!

THUS, Monterey's proud Tyrannosaurus Rex chapter was saved once more from the evils of post-18th Century life!

STILL another of KSBW's prominent on-camera news people will be leaving soon — and the departures are beginning to look like an exodus.

On the other hand, the recent spate of defections may simply be a rash of coincidences.

AT any rate, the newest secession from the news staff there is Dina Ruiz, who is leaving the end of the month in order to devote full-time to husband Clint Eastwood and 11-month-old daughter, Morgan.

Among others who have split or revealed their imminent departures within the last few months are weatherman Lawrence Karnow, weekend anchors Sharon Chin and Eric Collins, anchor Romney Dunbar, and reporter Rose Dean.

YET another headliner of the staff has notified the station of intent to leave, but will remain until a replacement is found.

We shall identify that one when a departure date is set.

GOSSIP ALERT! GOSSIP ALERT! . . . Oprah Winfrey and her man, Stedman Graham, lunched last week at Carmel's nonpareil Casanova restaurant.

They were in town for Oprah to do an interview of Clint Eastwood which ran on her talk show program this week.

(This must be Eastwood Month, for he was also interviewed last Sunday on "60 Minutes"!)

AND how's this for great luncheon vittles that Oprah and Stedman dined on at Casanova — Linguini con Scampi, Crepes Travise, and fresh green salads!

Their waiter, Russell Lefebvre, said both were extremely gracious and left a generous tip!

LET'S hear it for Oprah and Stedman — celebrities who act like celebrities ought!

INCIDENTALLY, Casanova restaurant is catnip to so-called "celebrities," Jack Nicholson having eaten there three nights in a row recently. And, good grief, Joe Montana ate there last night!

But we have to end this gossipy prattle, twaddle and moonshine immediately, lest this column's militant critic fires off another thundering salvo from his Pacific Grove bunker!

WE can't take the heat. (Nor the shrapnel.)

ONWARD . . . Christopher Dix, former general manager of Monterey Herald for a number of years, has accepted the post of G.M. of Stars & Stripes in Tokyo!

Indeed a traveler, Chris has toiled for publications in Australia, Hawaii and the Bay Area since leaving the Herald in 1993.

AND, as the holiday party season nears, keep one thing in mind:

Never mistake endurance for hospitality.

WHAT'S NEW with Meg

This week....about old cameras...hardwoods...hockey caps... ...a closing sale...and a great deal more.

Ambrose Pollock • Furnituremaker

Have you, like me, heard of AMBROSE POLLOCK, FURNITUREMAKER, but know little about him? Read on! Ambrose, a master woodworker in the truest sense, designs furniture, hand-picks only the very best wood (kao, California Claro walnut, and other fine hard woods) and magically transforms it into highly functional, beautiful objects from dining room sets to garage doors, to stairwells, to desks. And because he so loves his craft, the wood seems to live again! He conducts workshops, has worldwide clients, and a retail showroom, where his wife, Michele, schooled in her husband's philosophy, is happy to talk to you. Mission, betwn. 5th & 6th, Mission Patio Shops, Carmel. 625-6554

STOKE'S ADOBE – once again the important restaurant it was when known as Gallatins! Its three proprietors, Kirk and Dorthea Probasco and Executive Chef Brandon Miller are responsible, of course, along with the innate charm of this historic 1833 adobe home. STOKES ADOBE has what you want exciting cuisine lunch and dinner, a Sunday brunch you won't forget, excellent prices, three private party rooms, easy parking, sun and charm. And the menu fits all appetites - Small Bites (appetizers), Small Plates (soup, salad & such) and Large Plates (entrees). You'll love everything about it! In historic Monterey, Hartnell & Madison. 373-1110. Open 7 days.
P.S. More later on Hattie's Bar!

TOWN OR TRAVEL has never had more beautiful sweaters, shirts, pants and suits! To be specific: colorful acrylic bouclé cardigans in white, light blue, royal blue, lemon and jade - ideal any time, but great for the holidays. Stunning velour pants suit in charcoal black (more colors coming), comfortable and washes like a Turkish towel. Bleyle pants in checks and solids; and good to see, Bleyle basic skirts. Small preview of spring '98 in poly/cotton print shirts with long and short sleeves in spring colors. and at half price, provincial print bags in all sizes! Mission, betwn. 5th & 6th, on walkway to San Carlos, Carmel. 626-0276.

KID'N AROUND

It's called KID'N AROUND and for our kids, grand kids and the kid in all of us, it's a dream come true! This new shop in the Barnyard is all about sports cards, pro team apparel (basketball, football & baseball) and other sports-related items. You'll find the biggest selection of pro-team jerseys (from expansion teams to established teams), all baseball, football, basketball & hockey team caps, and in youth to adult sizes, jackets, t-shirts and sweatshirts. The full selection of sports cards, individual and packs, will make a collector purr! Linda and Don Perry, owners and experts in this field, hope you'll drop by soon. They purr, too! 620-0551 (next to Hedi's Shoes).

DEL MONTE PASTRY SHOP

It's not too late to order your Thanksgiving pies from DEL MONTE PASTRY! The bakers there will be baking all night so when you pick up your pies on Wednesday, they might still be warm. The usual Thanksgiving fare includes all fall favorites - pumpkin, pecan, apple, Dutch apple, mincemeat, berry and cherry pies, or something different like pumpkin cheesecake, pecan or pumpkin tarts! For dinner rolls, choose plain or 3-seed whole wheat (delicious!) French, Potato or Parkerhouse. By the way, moving date for this long-established bakery will be after the holidays! Trala! Del Monte Center, Mtry. Call 375-4222.

CARMEL PACIFIC BAGS

Perfect timing in discovering this new little Carmel industry, CARMEL PACIFIC BAGS! Helping to preserve our environment, recyclable fabric gift bags! Gift bags for any occasion in a wide assortment of attractive fabrics, some with themes such as wine, golf, music, kids, etc. In 7 sizes, they're ideal for jewelry, books, sports gear, clothing, toys, wines, you name it! Available now at UNA Gift Center, Neilsens, Surf n'Sand, Cornucopia, Carmel Mailboxes, Monte Vista Liquors and Nevada Bob. (Call 626-6760 for additional listings). Gift wrapping becomes not only a breeze and a gift in itself, but by reusing, a gift to our planet.

Parsley Sage & Thyme

As you well know, PARSLEY, SAGE & THYME is a full house full of fine kitchenware. In it you'll find anything you could ever need in the kitchen, plus for good measure, a little something extra. How about a colorful Italian ceramic rooster standing 25" high, absolutely splendid for the dining room? A table top of rock salt and peppercorns under glass, with legs of salt & pepper shakers? Martini glasses, olives, stirrers etc. in all-over prints on napkins, placemats, aprons, towels? And the absolute essential for serving caviar, mother-of-pearl spoons! Sheer delight, wouldn't you say? At the Crossroads, near Mailboxes, Etc. 620-0515

All refreshed and back from his vacation, Russell of the LEVIN GALLERY is ready to do business with you. Especially, that is, if you have a camera pre-dating 1970! It seems classic cameras are in big demand, to say nothing of the hundreds if not thousands of dollars the right ones will bring. So be on special lookout for a Leica, Contax, Nikon, Hasselblad or Linhof and if you find one, call Russell immediately. For that matter if you find any camera from before 1970 give him a ring and he'll tell you what it's worth over the phone. Worth cleaning out the attic, don't you think? 408 Calle Principal, Monterey. 649-1166.

Who guarantees to clean your rugs, carpets and upholstery without using steam, soap foam, powders, and without odor? who guarantees to remove soil and spots so they'll never return? Who guarantees 100% safe solutions on your home furnishings? Who guarantees walking on them immediately? And who guarantees no charge if you're not satisfied? The answers to these questions are THE BELMONT METHOD, of course! For your free estimate, call today, 625-3242.

CARMEL LIFESTYLE

Have you heard the news that CARMEL LIFESTYLE in the Barnyard is closing? We're all going to miss this women's clothing shop and those clothes with a California flair, but possibly Paula and Tom want a break! In the meantime, we get a break with everything in the shop reduced 20% - 60%! As you know, there are 3, 000 square feet full of new fall and holiday merchandise and everything must go! Don't miss out on these great prices during the holidays, but as I'm sure you realize, the best selections are right now! Suggest you hurry on over! The Barnyard, Carmel. (Across from the Thunderbird) 624-7027.

- Tomorrow, local author, Arie Johnson-Stovall, will sign her charming book of memoirs - Thunderbird, 1 to 3 pm!
- Call 645-4728 for information on the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society's three Christmas Concerts - Dec. 5th, 6th and 7th.

MONTEREY COUNTY SHERIFF'S ADVISORY COUNCIL PRESENTS QUITE A DINNER

"MY PARENTS believed that child labor was a requirement," said guest speaker Leon Panetta to a responsive audience at the Monterey County Sheriff's Advisory Council Annual Dinner/Auction.

Social Spotlight

By Dodie Barkley

The former White House Chief of Staff extolled the virtues of hard work, dedication and communication during the dinner, presented last Friday at Quail Lodge. He complimented the council and the sheriffs for achieving those goals, making us all realize how important they are. He added that two of his family members work in law enforcement in Monterey and King City.

Co-chairs Alan Richmond and Advisory Council President Marty Haskell and Sheriff Norman Hicks reported that the council was founded by Ed Haber and Roger Williams in the early '80s. It has raised more than $300,000 for Search and Rescue, Sheriff's Emergency Assistance Team (SEAT) and many other valuable groups that participate with law enforcement groups county-wide. As guests entered, they saw the impressive emergency mobile unit parked outside which was available for touring.

Film legend Doris Day poses with Sheriff Norm Hicks at the Sheriff's Dinner/Auction.

Several volunteers, including Steve Hershey, Andy Bryant, Richard Mylar and Dennis K. Evans, Jr. were cited for their hard work in combating disasters in the county this year. John Auld-Sussot was the "Volunteer of the Year" and his wife, Christy, received a huge bouquet of flowers.

The live auction featured golf packages, overnight stays at posh hotels and "A Day with the Sheriff." These brought in much-needed revenue for the advisory council.

I spied actress Doris Day, looking as beautiful as ever, and her son Terry Melcher. Also present were Teresa Edwards, Dennis and Karen LeVett, Sal and Linda Balesteri, Carol Benton, Dustin Benton, Bob Mulford, Judy Higgerson, Jim Procida, Ray George who started the D.A.R.E. program, and Highway Patrol Captain Henry Wilson.

Volunteers are always needed. Call 647-7911 for more information.

■ Politicians serve public for Red Cross

I don't care what the others thought: our waitress at Table 8 was the best, Monterey County Supervisor Judy Pennycook. She was fast, courteous and kept the bread and wine coming. The event: the American Red Cross (Monterey County Chapter) 1997 Politician's Dinner on Nov. 5. The place: Ferrantes atop the Monterey Marriott.

The dinner was grand and featured celebrity servers. Among them were supervisors Pennycook and Edith Johnsen, and Mayors Dan Albert of Monterey and Elizabeth Williams of Gonzales. State Senator Bruce McPherson, dressed in kilts, waited on his share of diners. You've got great legs, Bruce!

Master of Ceremonies Alan Richmond, with 28 years in broadcasting, introduced the wait staff, and one of them demanded a 5 percent tip — all in great fun — as the dinner continued merrily on.

Stephen Thigpen, county board chairman, told us that the local Red Cross trained 5,500 people in first aid and 1,500 students in water safety in 1996.

The Red Cross was liaison in contacting 269 military families; 24 volunteers worked in that capacity. Of their 550 volunteers, 200 are trained to work in national disasters. Richmond reported the Red Cross contacted him in a jungle in Vietnam to inform him that his daughter had been born.

The Carmel Red Cross was represented by Tom and Camilla May, and others.

Mayor Williams of Gonzales has been a Red Cross volunteer for 35 years, and Senator McPherson served as director of the American Red Cross Chapter in Santa Cruz. McPherson was proud to add that he has donated a total of 10 gallons of blood through the years.

After applauding the celebrity servers, director Jackie Craghead announced that the chapter will celebrate its 10th anniversary next year. They plan a formal dinner at the historic Naval Postgraduate School, which, she noted, was proper and fitting for the historic beginnings of the American Red Cross.

Socialites Karen LeVett, Marty Melcher, Teresa Edwards and Linda and Sal Balesteri enjoy cocktail time at the sheriff's dinner/auction.

■ Junior League wows 'em— 'An Evening in the French Quarter'

The auction items were eye-popping: an Austin Healy Sprite Mark IV, a Washington D.C. vacation sponsored by Vice President Al Gore and Tipper Gore, a trip to New Orleans, a Hobiecat 16, tickets to Riverdance in San Francisco, and more still.

Co-chairs Julie Aronson, Kim Donlon, Cathy Lee and committee member Christy Anderson were the girls who worked the magic by getting items like these to support the efforts of the Junior League of Monterey County.

As the young women, all volunteers, dressed in their finest, stood up at the podium to be lauded for their hard work by Junior League of Monterey County President Debra Schadeck, it was hard for us not to rush up and hug them all.

This was the league's 43rd Annual Auction Party, held Saturday at Quail Lodge. The volunteers located such incredible items and hundreds of people with fat wallets to buy them, that they each should have been awarded platinum rings festooned with diamonds. The silent auction contained hundreds of donations from more than 200 local businesses including bistros, banks, travel agencies, department stores, beauty salons and others.

The mother of one volunteer told me that most of them had worked until the party started at 6 p.m. And what a party! Waiters carrying trays of hors d'oeuvres could hard-

Junior League of Monterey County co-chair Kim Donlon, president Debra Schadeck, and co-chairs Cathy Lee and Julie Aronson greet guests at 'An Evening in the French Quarter.' These women brought in indescribable donations from all over the country for the auctions, and they worked all night long, helping the auctioneer to get bids on them. An incredible group!

Ragtime by the Dixie Gumbo Band made it hard not to dance while you dined.

Ken and Mary Dekker from Carmel Valley Ranch bid on more than five items at 'An Evening in the French Quarter' dinner/auction Saturday.

It was truly "down and dirty," pulling at you to get up and sing your heart out, especially when they played, "Down in Old Joe's Barroom!" Performing yeoman service were auctioneers Charles and Jim Huggins.

The Junior League's mission is two-fold. They educate members to be leaders and they work in the community to improve the lives of women and children in health and education fields. In Marina they help with clothing and schools. They collaborate with Childrens Services International; Shelter Plus; Postpone, which works with teens helping them make the right decisions; and MY Museum in Monterey which the JLMC got off the ground with a large grant of money. President Schadeck told me that they have a sustaining group of 350 older women, 150 of whom are still very active.

Bonne chance to these dedicated committee members who produced what is sure to be one of the most memorable events in League history!

■ Yellow Brick Road points toward success

Beverley Ambort, president of the board of directors of the Yellow Brick Road Benefit Shop in the Barnyard, told me that 84 volunteers and their partners attended the annual Appreciation Reception last Friday at the new Monterey County Youth Museum (MY Museum) in Monterey.

An outgrowth of planning by the Junior League of Monterey, the museum now has its own board of directors and non-profit status. A special exhibit at the museum is the puppet theater which recently received a grant from the Yellow Brick Road Benefit Shop.

Volunteers enjoyed hors d'oeuvres served by Tarpy's Catering and wine by Chateau Julien. Beautiful flowers were given to Karen Watkins, board president of the museum and Beth Tapp, museum operations manager.

The Yellow Brick Road Benefit Shop has made grants of $655,362 since it opened eight years ago. Donations are granted monthly from the total proceeds.

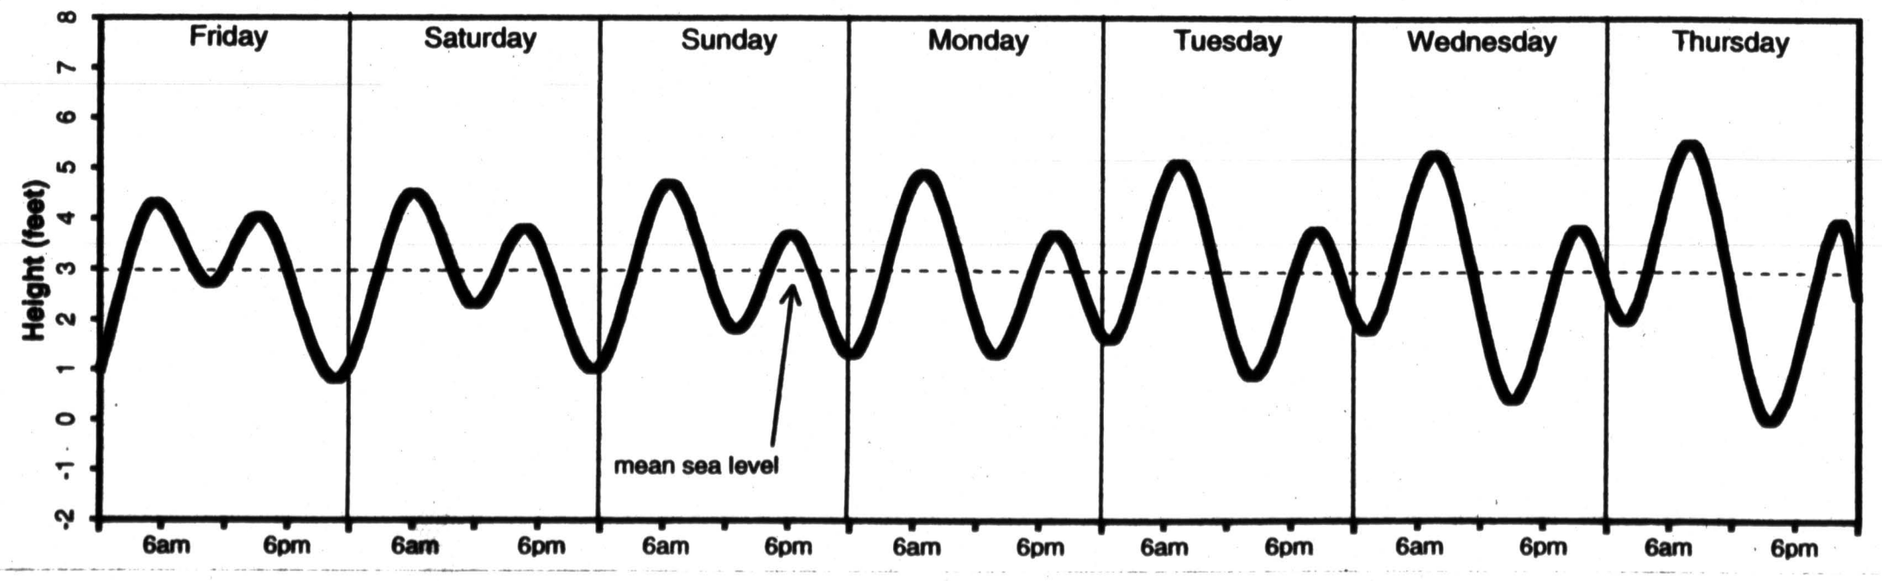
Carmel Bay Tides — November 21 to 27, 1997



• Use this chart to help plan your activities along our incomparable coastline. For example, a sunset campfire at the beach is best planned when there will not be a high tide during the evening hours. Very low tides (especially those below the zero level) provide the best opportunity to explore local tide pools. Fishing is said to be best on days when the tidal variation is greatest. And don't forget that coastal flooding and erosion can be severe when a very high tide coincides with a major storm.

• Tides are primarily caused by the pull of the moon and the sun on earth's oceans. Accordingly, the greatest tides (spring tides) occur when the sun, moon and Earth are aligned (full moon or new moon). When the sun, moon and earth form a right angle tides are smaller (neap tides).

• Every 25 hours there are two high tides and two low tides. "Mean sea level" is the average of all tides and is the same everywhere on the Earth. "Mean high tide" (approximately 4.7 feet on the tide chart) is the average of all local high tides and, in California, is the legal boundary between private coastal lands and publicly-owned tidelands. The zero on tide charts (also called the "datum") is the average of the lower of the low tides that occur in each cycle.

• Chart prepared by The Carmel Pine Cone using data provided by the National Weather Service.

VILLAGE VERSE

DEER MAY BE FOLLOWING ME

When I don't think about them there they are again
casual as basketball players, hair just combed, easy in their bodies, just eating sweet young grasses
in small delicate bites, and always turning around between bites
to see who's watching.
Where are the uncombed ones?
Back in the woods, waiting to die.

Detro at the time, "Her sound is tender, worldly, hopeful, witty at the right times, innocent, wise... And her phrasing? Simply what you'd expect from a thoughtful percussionist."

In 1996 Dottie was featured in the 20th anniversary edition of Modern Drummer Magazine in a five-part article and later that year she was invited by Dr. Billy Taylor to perform a tribute to women in jazz at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. Yet another local treasure that sometimes seems to be taken for granted, Dottie will be feted at Friday's concert. Music starts at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $25 and seating is limited. Call 655-2010 to make reservations.

Andrea's Fault at Morgan's in Monterey

Local acoustic trio Andrea's Fault will perform its third annual concert at Morgan's Coffee & Tea this Saturday showcasing new original material. Says lead singer and songwriter Andrea Carter, "When we formed the band two years ago, our first show was at Morgan's ... this concert is a benchmark for us each year to see the progress we've made." The group, comprised of singers Carter and Darrin Michell; and bassist Rick Chelew, plays a unique blend of American folk music that incorporates delta blues, swing, ska, gospel....

Says bassist Chelew (who also plays with the Cachagua Playboys), "I love to play with these guys because Andrea's and Darrin's songs are not confessional or preachy like so many of the current singer-songwriter' genre." Also performing with the trio this Saturday are Mike Eckstrom on rubboard and Wendy Street on violin. Music starts at 8 p.m. and there is a $5 cover charge.

Other Venues: Other News

Nick Manzo, proprietor of Nick's Place aka 180 East Club, has sold his Franklin Street Nightclub to partners Barbara Hogue and Gene Mune. According to Hogue no changes will be made until next year. The recently remodeled nightclub has seen numerous incarnations over the years including The Cuckoo's Nest, Haggio's, Sharkeys ... et al. Good luck to the new owners. It's a rough business with loads of competition.

Plenty of good music around town in the weeks to come including gigs at Doc's Nightclub by The Broadway Band (this Friday), swingin' blues with The Tone Kings (Saturday), reggae with the Amandala Poets (Friday, Nov. 28) and Red Beans & Rice (Saturday, Nov. 29).

At Whitey's Place located in the American Tin Cannery Shopping Center in Pacific Grove, owner/proprietor Jeff White makes a good argument for being the best all-around rock venue on the Monterey Peninsula. Tonight at Whitey's Iguana Jive slithers into town with its melodic hard rock sound and on Saturday local rock 'n' roll group The Karma Band performs. On Friday, Nov. 28 Rock Steady Posse plays funk and reggae and on Saturday the 29th former 3rd Degree LeBurn frontman Al James brings his new band into the intimate sports bar/night club. No cover unless specified. Music starts at 9:30 p.m.

More than just an impressive bookstore and music outlet, Borders, located in the new Sand Dollar Shopping Center in Sand City, has been promoting some fine music events. Upcoming concerts of note include jazz saxophonist Patt Spears-Casion tonight at 8; songwriter and Latin American "new song" guitarist Jose Hernandez on Saturday, Nov. 22; and "New Age" keyboardist William Watson on Sunday, Nov. 30 at 3 pm. For more info call Borders at 899-6643.

Santiago Duckworth — founder of Carmel-by-the-Sea

By ESTHER TROSOW and PAT HATHAWAY

While James Franklin Devendorf has often been credited with being the founder of Carmel, it is often forgotten that he was really the successor of the enterprising entrepreneur Santiago J. Duckworth.

Duckworth, a Monterey native, was educated by the Franciscan Fathers at the Watsonville Orphan Asylum. In 1886, the 21-year-old Duckworth started a real estate and insurance business in partnership with his brother, Belisario. Their business was located on Alvarado Street in downtown Monterey.

Duckworth dreamed of creating a Catholic community similar to Pacific Grove's Methodist retreat. This plan was inspired by two pivotal factors. In the 1880s, the Carmel Mission had been renovated and rededicated, and was rapidly becoming a popular tourist destination. Also, there were persistent rumors that an extension of the Southern Pacific's Monterey branch line was imminent. The Pacific Improvement Company's Monterey Extension Railroad Company was to run from the foot of Washington Street in Monterey to Pacific Grove, to the sand dunes at Lake Majella, through present day Pebble Beach, and eventually to the mouth of the Carmel River.

In 1888 Honore Escolle, the owner of a large tract of land where Carmel now stands, bonded 324.36 acres of land to the Duckworth brothers. The land was divided into four tracts, with the stipulation that all of the first tract must be sold within one-and-a-half years before sales in the second tract could begin. The second, third, and fourth tracts were to be sold in the same manner, within six months each. Even more strings were attached to this deal, including a minimum price of $10 per lot and a maximum lot size of 50 x 125 feet. Escolle maintained the prerogative to void the contract if these conditions were not honored. Two of these tracts were eighty acres each, and the one bounded by the present-day 12~ Avenue, Junipero Street, Ocean Avenue, and the eastern limit of the city became known as "Eighty Acres."

Duckworth lost no time surveying and promoting the property, which he called "Carmel City." Sales were brisk at first, thanks in large part to the progress made on the railroad extension. By July 1889, Pacific Grove had a depot

Market for multi-million-dollar homes still very strong in Pebble Beach

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

SALES FIGURES for the first nine months of 1997 show that this year may surpass the incredible pace of 1996 when it comes to sales of very expensive homes in the ultra-exclusive residential areas of Del Monte Forest.

According to Mike Canning, who specializes in high-end homes for Coldwell Banker Del Monte Realty, 35 homes in the Forest sold for more than $1 million last year. Of those, 7 sold for more than $4 million.

Through the third quarter of this year, 21 homes had sold for more than $1M, and 10 more were in escrow, raising the possibility that even more of the super-expensive homes would be sold this year than last.

One of the impressive homes currently in escrow is a Mike Canning listing — the former estate of William and Mary Agee on 17 Mile Drive adjacent to the Pebble Beach Golf Links. The sale price has not been revealed, pending close of escrow, but the asking price had been $8,750,000.

What's makes this year even more impressive, Canning told The Pine Cone, is the incredible sales performance of the new condominiums at Spanish Bay.

All 32 of the units built in the current phase have sold or are in escrow — and almost all for more than $1 million.

When those figures are added to the sales figures quoted above for detached single-family homes, 1997 will probably be the all-time record year for million-dollar-plus properties in Pebble Beach.

Restaurant can't have asphalt-shingle roof

On Wednesday, the Carmel Planning Commission said no to an asphalt-shingle roof on the Em Lee's Restaurant.

Commissioners said they didn't like the idea of reroofing one building with asphalt shingles when it was connected to building with a wood shake roof behind it.

Anthony Compagno, who owns the building, said he wanted to use asphalt shingle because wood shakes are no longer in favor with the city. After Compagno read the staff's recommendation to deny the roof, he decided not to go to the meeting.

"The reasons they think of are crazy," he said. "Those are judgment calls. I have three separate roofs on that complex to begin with," he said.

Staff said that a asphalt roof would "create an uncomplimenatry design element" in a neighborhood dominated by wood shake.

While Compagno owns the building, John Madden is one of the owners of Em Lee's Restaurant.

Duckworth

and rails were extending to the sand dunes. But the railroad did not extend to the Carmel River like Duckworth had wished. Despite this, Duckworth sold over 200 lots by the end of 1889, with a large number going to educators from the San Francisco area.

In 1890, Duckworth pitched his Catholic resort idea to the Catholic Ladies Aid Society, proposing to donate five acres (which he called "Paradise Park") to the society. He also offered 100 lots to be sold to raise building funds for an assembly hall. The directors of the society agreed to the offer, and by late 1890, over 200 more lots had been sold.

Sales were booming, and Duckworth's recently built Hotel Carmelo accommodated potential buyers. Other improvements to Carmel City included the Robertson and Hunter cottages on Fourth Avenue and Guadalupe Street. The two-story hotel, along with the Victorian cottages, were featured in a promotional brochure produced in 1890. C.W.J. Johnson was probably hired to photograph the highlights of Carmel City for this publication. Johnson was the area's most prominent photographer at that time, and maintained a studio at the elegant Hotel Del Monte.

According to the 1890 brochure, Mrs. Abbie Hunter—a San Francisco businesswoman who had already purchased seven Carmel City lots—had become an associate of the Duckworth brothers in this enterprise. At about the same time, the Duckworths were testing the political waters: S.J. had recently been appointed the deputy city clerk in Monterey, and had unsuccessfully sought the Republican nomination for state assemblyman. Both brothers tried the political waters again in, but only Santiago was successful. With their increasing participation in the world of politics, the brothers played a less active role in the Carmel City venture, and Mrs. Hunter became the driving force. About this time, the name "Carmel by the Sea" appeared in a local newspaper, perhaps the first time the town was given that moniker. In December 1894, Duckworth distanced himself even farther from the project when he transferred ownership of the lots still recorded in his name to his mother-in-law.

By February 1895, the venture was floundering. Mrs. Hunter was arrested in San Francisco for obtaining funds under false pretenses, and a Monterey County judge ordered her Carmel lots sold at public auction. The Hunter cottage passed to other hands, and it became a summer guest rental. After her name was cleared, Abbie Hunter resumed selling lots in Carmel. The venture never reached its potential, and the original requirements concerning sales of tracts 2, 3, and 4 set out in the deal with Honore Escolle were never met.

But the dream of developing Escolle's land into a town called Carmel was to pass to new partners. In November 1902, Frank Powers and J. Franklin Devendorf incorporated their interests into the Carmel Development Company. Powers had amassed a good chunk of Carmel acreage by this time, including Santiago Duckworth's Hotel Carmelo. Powers moved the hotel to its current location on Ocean Avenue, where it became the root of what is now known as the Pine Inn.

Although Powers and Devendorf were far more successful in their promotion of Carmel, it was the enterprising Santiago Duckworth's vision that paved their way.

Just as Hunter, Powers, and Devendorf had Santiago Duckworth's foundation to build on, the authors are grateful they have the extensive research of Elena and Elmer Lagorio on this subject.

ed water management.

One case where benefits of these forewarned extremals of climatic change is the consideration ongoing in our demands for a single water supply project on the Carmel or Salinas river. The State Public Utilities hearings on the new Carmel River dam certainly should be flexible to incorporate the too wet / too dry water cycle of El Niños.

Look at the flooding and coastal storms as a major source of natural desalinated water, delivered free. Are we catching and storing these waters in ponds, cisterns, small reservoirs, wetlands to minimize damage and high costs of water supplies in the DROUGHT periods?

Should we be opening up our options for smaller water quality and supply projects that can accommodate both the wet and dry El Niño patterns?. Keep tuned to the FEMA-sponsored El Niño workshops and local contingency damage control planning sessions.

Let's Hear It For Carmel Celebrates Community Committee

Dear Editor,

On October 25th many Carmelites, their families and friends had the opportunity to enjoy a beautiful parade on Ocean Avenue and devour a delicious chicken barbecue and listen to lovely music in Devendorf Park planned and coordinated by the Carmel Celebrates Community Committee (CCCC). The event seeks to celebrate the City of Carmel-By-The-Sea's birthday, with a Halloween parade and harvest (banquet) festival Even the weather cooperated by providing warm, sunny.y skies throughout the entire event.

But the parade, barbecue and music are only the "tip of the iceberg" seen by those who attend. Underneath this tip are countless hours of time and effort by the members of the CCCC and City workers spent to put on this event for all of Carmel to enjoy. It is those volunteer members of CCCC that I wish to recognize and thank for this huge undertaking

What is the payoff for these volunteers? Our efforts are energized by the end results of raising money for the Mayor's Youth Fund and the satisfaction of seeing happy people at the event, said Merv Sutton the Chairman of CCCC. This year's event raised $3,000 for the Mayor's Youth Fund; and saw several hundred people eating great barbecue and listening to the sounds of wonderful music in the Park. What great way for Carmelites to celebrate their City's birthday, added Mayor Ken White.

SO, LET'S HEAR IT FOR THE MEMBERS OF CCCC . . . You guys really know how to throw a birthday celebration!!

Cartoon's 'intolerance'

Dear Editor:

I feel the Pine Cone displayed a great deal of intolerance by printing Bill Bates' derogatory cartoon in its Nov. 14 edition.

Bill Bates, I suggest, should go to the California Room of the Monterey Library and read materials on the role of the Jesuits in California history and how they labored diligently to help the Indians. If they could be called "vandals," so could we whose ancestors stole the Indians' land.

I feel the Pine Cone and Bill Bates owe the Catholic community a sincere apology.

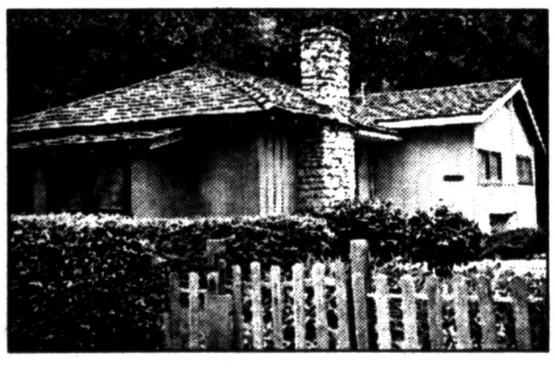
THE MITCHELL GROUP

RESIDENTIAL AND INVESTMENT REAL ESTATE AND PROPERTY MANAGEMENT



CARMEL — A Carmel charmer in the best location. This property features Carmel stone walkways and patio, with fabulous mature trees. A wonderful old stone wood burning fireplace adds to the warmth of this special hideaway. Generous use of skylights and an eat in kitchen nook complete this three bedroom, one and one half bath home. Just a short stroll to the beach. $550,000.

CARMEL VALLEY — This home has three bedrooms and three baths in 3,000 square feet set on two acres. The home has been extensively remodeled. A one-bedroom suite with its own entrance is perfect for guests, grannies or use as a home office. The heated pool, corral for two horses, and proximity to Garland Park provide a full range of outdoor activities. $680,000.

CARMEL — On three lots of record in Carmel-by-the-Sea, this is a residence of estate quality. The perfect location: two blocks up to town, two blocks down to the beach. Six bedrooms, five baths, fabulous kitchen with river rock fireplace, Carmel stone fireplace. A versatile floor plan, excellent for indoor and outdoor entertaining. $1,650,000.

CARMEL — A home of over 3,000 square foot, which can comfortably sleep thirteen. Stunning views of Pt. Lobos. Terrific floor plan on several levels, with access to view decks from almost every room. This is a great home for entertaining. Four bedrooms plus four sleeping lofts and three baths. So much home for the money in Carmel! $995,000.

CARMEL HIGHLANDS — A home of timeless architecture on a lovely acre lot just above Mal Paso Canyon. The ocean views — both white and blue — are sensational. The home, with its old world touches, is reminiscent of another time. Three bedrooms, two and a half baths. The thoughtful floor plan creates wonderful guest quarters and a very private space for the artist in all of us. $595,000.
